

SAC: Our Doomsday Machine

By JOHN T. WHEELER

Offutt Air Force Base, Neb. (UP) — Shielded by hundreds of tons of concrete beneath a sun-seared Nebraska slope, the "brain" of America's doomsday machine rests, but never slumbers.

A call from the president to the control center of the Strategic Air Command and in seconds the machine would spew bursts of coded messages to its bomber and missile fleets, unleashing man's closest approximation to Armageddon.

Most of the crewmen in either the bomber or missile force of SAC don't believe in the possibility of that kind of warfare; don't believe the nuclear olympics they have been trained for will ever be held.

The movie "Dr. Strangelove" was subtitled: "How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb."

"Love a hydrogen bomb?!" one officer says. "My God, you've got to be kidding. Don't you know what these things are?"

In the space age, man has been forced to think in huge numbers and awesome concepts. Men journeying to the moon is at least commonplace, if not commonplace. But how can man grasp that the U.S. nuclear arsenal is some 100,000 times more destructive than the combined force of the two Model-T style atom bombs dropped on Japan? Or that America's poised megatonnage equals the equivalent of 3,000 pounds of dynamite for every man, woman and child on this planet?

Peace Motto

And if this can be digested, then how to explain that Strategic Air Command, America's prime potential deliverer of nuclear holocaust, has as its motto: "Peace is our profession."

But from generals' offices to pilots' living rooms, the men whose daily task is to think and plan the unthinkable, the motto is not merely a public relations gimmick but an axiom of what one general called "nasty strategic realities."

America would never start a nuclear war, asserts SAC's commander, Gen. Bruce K. Holloway. And the Soviet Union would never dare start one either as long as the Kremlin knows the United States could weather a Soviet first strike and inflict a counterblow that could hurl the Soviet Union backwards into the pre-Industrial Revolution era.

The argument is that SAC, which observed its quarter-century mark this year, can keep the nuclear peace, but only if it stays the fastest gun in the frontier atmosphere of world power politics.

Peace through power was an earlier SAC motto and it still is implicit in the Air Force's annual claims for billions of dollars. The proposed commitment to the B1 bomber which, if finally approved, probably will be the single most expensive weapons system in history.

The B1 is a stunningly sophisticated supersonic jet carrying twice the nuclear payload of the aging B52s with a far better chance of punching successfully through Soviet air defenses.

The price tag is staggering, even if the Air Force estimate of $11 billion for a 250-plane force is accurate. Congressional critics, citing huge cost overruns on recent weapons systems and aircraft, term the estimate laughably understated. A report submitted by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, contend the most optimistic figure for the B1 system including its nuclear-tipped short range attack missile (SRAM), would be from $20 to $30 billion and might run all the way to $70 billion when all needed hardware is included.

Must Be Paid

But even some of the harshest critics of the B1 and Pentagon spending privately agree that whatever the price of a reliable and effective deterrent is, it must be paid. "We're not quarreling with whether SAC is necessary," said one. "We're arguing the B1 isn't the weapons system SAC needs, at least not as it is presently designed."

Laird to Seek $80 Billion for '72

Defense Chief Says Army Preparing to Cut 50,000 Men

Compiled From News Wires

Washington — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird indicated Saturday he is recommending a military budget for next year of about $80 billion, up about $4 billion from this year, because of service pay increases and inflation.

At the same time, Laird told newsmen the Pentagon is preparing to cut the Army by another 50,000 men in anticipation of final congressional action ordering such a manpower slash below Nixon administration proposals for this year.

"I still think it is a mistake," Laird said. He said such a reduction will cut into the basic force structure, and implied it will not speed U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

The Pentagon chief spoke with reporters aboard his plane en route to a Navy change-of-command ceremony at Norfolk, Va., where he said that high unemployment and other difficulties in shifting back to a peacetime economy "are now behind us."

"I believe we are coming successfully through the war-to-peace economic change," Laird told the bermeaded Navy officers and their white-gloved wives on the hangar deck of the aircraft carrier Independence.

In his airborne news conference, Laird made a pitch for keeping up the level of the defense budget in order to negotiate from strength.

"I feel this is not the time to make a further reduction in the overall defense budget," he said.

The Pentagon has explained that the rising budget is due to inflation and not to increases in men or material.

Defense Dept. spokesmen have also explained that the winding down of the Vietnam war will not mean a reduced defense budget because of needed allocations to modernize the services, especially the Navy.

Laird said "even if $80 billion were approved, the expenditure level will still be lower than the pre-Vietnam period."

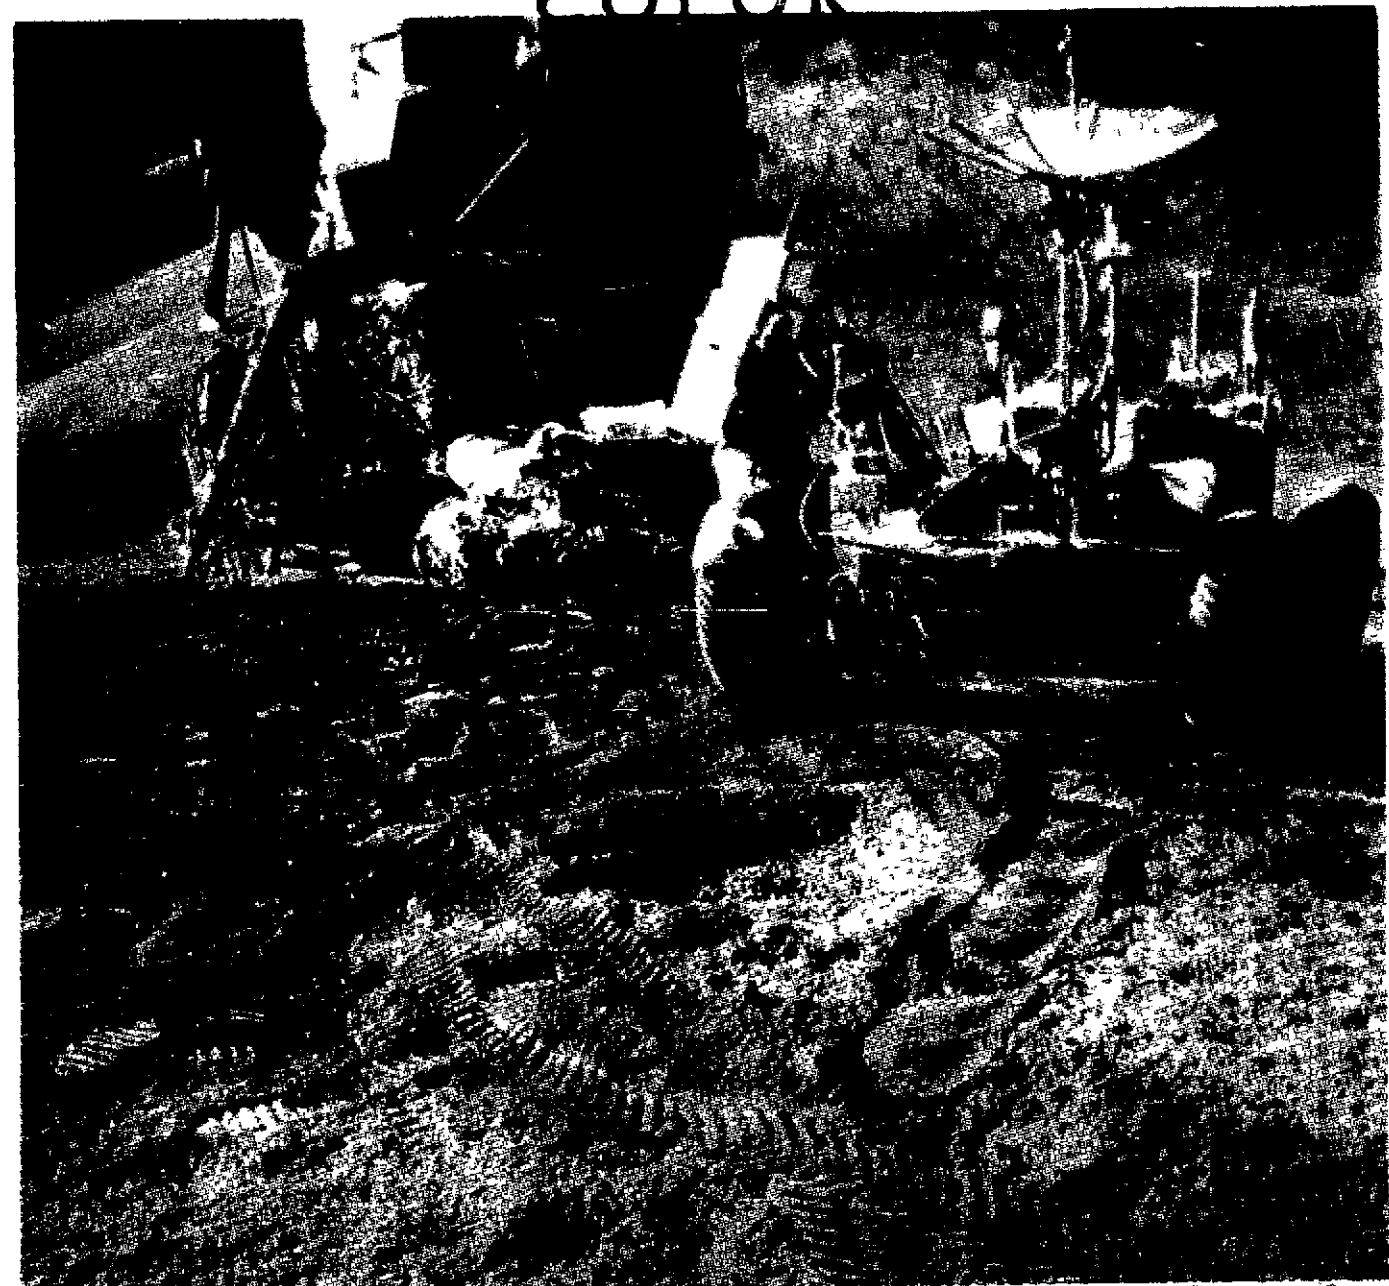

He said he had moved to adjust upward earlier budget guidance he had given the armed services to help them plan for next year. Associates said the "add ons" to his earlier guidance envisioning a $79 billion budget were intended to provide more money to increase ship and aircraft operation time — in other words to step up combat readiness.

The Nixon administration last winter proposed a $76 billion defense spending budget for the 12 months that began July 1. Congress has moved to boost that total to about $77.6 billion by piling additional military pay increases on top of those the administration proposed to bring about an all-volunteer force by mid-1973.

In a unique departure from past practice, Laird has arranged for the Joint Chiefs of Staff to argue against defense budget cuts in sessions with such administration officials as Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, budget director George Shultz and Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

The military chiefs already have met with Nixon to make their case. "The chiefs should have an opportunity to speak their minds without any censorship by me," Laird said.

KGB Caught Searching Cottage Solzhenitsyn Protests Assaulting of Friend

Compiled From News Wires

Moscow — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, charging that Soviet security police have harassed him for years, has protested to the government after an incident two days ago in which he said agents assaulted a friend who had caught them illegally searching his country cottage.

The 52-year old novelist, whose works have long been banned in his own country, sent an open letter Friday to Yuri Andropov, the head of the committee of state security, better known by its Russian initials as the KGB, and a copy to Premier Alexei Kosygin, asking an investigation and exposure of the incident.

Friends of the novelist distributed copies to Western newsmen Saturday.

"For many years, I have borne in silence the lawlessness of your employees," he said to Andropov. "The inspection of all my correspondence, the confiscation of half of it, the search of my correspondents' homes, and their official and administrative persecution, the spying around my house, the shadowing of visitors, the tapping of telephone conversations, the drilling of holes in ceilings, the placing of recording apparatuses in my city apartment and at my garden cottage, and a persistent slander campaign against me from speakers' platforms when they are offered to employees of your ministry."

"But after the raid Friday, I will no longer be silent," he said.

Needed Car Part

He said he had become ill in Moscow and had asked a friend of his, Alexander Gorlov, a doctoral candidate in engineering, to go to his country cottage, some 40 miles southwest of Moscow, and get a part for his car.

"But it turned out there was no lock on the house, and voices could be heard from inside. Gorlov stepped inside and demanded the robbers' documents. In the small structure, where three or four can barely turn around, there were about ten of them in plain clothes," Solzhenitsyn wrote.

"On the command of the senior officer — 'to the woods with him and silence him' — they bound Gorlov, knocked him down, and dragged him face down into the woods and beat him viciously. Simultaneously, others were running by a circuitous route through the bushes, carrying to their car, packages, papers, objects (perhaps also a part from the apparatus they had brought themselves)," he continued.

"However, Gorlov fought back vigorously and yelled, summoning witnesses. Neighbors from other garden plots came running in response to his shouts and barred the robbers' way to the highway and demanded their identification documents. Then one of the robbers presented a Red identification card and the neighbors let them pass," Solzhenitsyn said.

"They led Gorlov, his face mutilated and his suit torn to ribbons, to the car. 'Fine methods you have,' he said to those who led him. 'We are on an operation and on an operation we can do anything,'" the novelist said his friend was told.

Pledge Refused

Taken to a police station, Solzhenitsyn said Gorlov was asked to pledge secrecy about the incident, and was threatened that "if Solzhenitsyn finds out about what took place . . . it's all over for you. Your official career will go no farther."

"Gorlov is a doctoral candidate. Those who know our way of life, know the full feasibility of these threats," Solzhenitsyn wrote. "But Gorlov did not give in to them, refused to sign the pledge and now is threatened with reprisals."

Pacification Suffers as GIs Depart

Saigon (UPI) — Communist activity in the northern and central provinces of South Vietnam has quickened with the withdrawal of U.S. forces and rural security declined in those areas, a computer analysis of the American pacification efforts showed Saturday.

In the country's most populous province, Binh Dinh, the number of Viet Cong-controlled hamlets rose from zero in April to about 40 in June, U.S. sources said. The number of poorly-controlled hamlets in Binh Dinh increased from about 60 late last year to more than 200 — about one-third of the province total — in June.

The pacification program appears holding its own in the southern provinces, the sources said.

The still-secret June figures of the so-called Hamlet Evaluation Survey (HES), a computerized measure of whether the government is gaining or losing ground in every hamlet in South Vietnam, shows a loss of security for the first time in two years in every one of the five provinces comprising northernmost military region one, the sources said.

A similar, but less serious decline has been discovered in Phu Yen Province, adjoining Binh Dinh on the south, sources said.

In the five northern provinces, the sources said the slippage varied from slight to significant. It was worst in Quang Nam Province, where South Vietnam's second largest city, Da Nang, is located.

By contrast, in Quang Tri, just below the DMZ, where the population is packed into the coastal plain, the security slippage was insignificant despite the fact major North Viet names forces control two-thirds of the total land area.

The slippage coincided with the departure of large numbers of American troops. In the north, the departure of all U.S. Marine combat units and some Army elements as well has cut American forces from 115,000 men last February to 77,000 now.

IRA Factions Announce Different Goals Another British Soldier Killed on Belfast Street

Belfast, Northern Ireland — A British soldier was shot and killed Saturday night on Crumlin Road as he moved in, with fellow troopers, to disperse a crowd gathered near the Ardoyne area of Belfast.

He was the third soldier and the 26th person to die in Northern Ireland the past week. He was the 13th British trooper killed in fighting this year.

The shot came out of the crowd and the soldier died about 15 minutes later, changing the mood in this city which had enjoyed the most nearly normal day in a week.

Throughout the day troops in Belfast had been engaged mainly in tearing down barricades and removing rubble from the streets. There was an incident on the border near Newry when soldiers exchanged gunfire with a group of IRA men apparently trying to smuggle arms across the border.

Security men now believe that setpiece battles with IRA forces are over. Instead, they believe the provisional and "official" wings of the IRA will switch to bombing and sniping, accompanied by kidnapping or assassination of politicians, police chiefs and judges.

Goals Differ

However, the feuding IRA factions announced different objectives Saturday.

In Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic, Cathal Goulding, chief of staff of the so-called "official" wing, demanded an end to street fighting and other violence in Northern Ireland and called for a campaign of civil disobedience.

John Kelly, a leader of the IRA "provisional" wing, who escaped from a news conference in Belfast only minutes ahead of British troops, told newsmen on arrival in Dublin that his forces will step up their war in the streets of Belfast to oust the British and also carry their struggle to England.

The "official" wing is the traditional IRA organization and politically it is leftist. The provisionals are the right wing faction that claims responsibility for most of the violence in Northern Ireland.

The provisionals have vowed to throw the British into the Irish Sea by all means possible and to rid the Emerald Isle of all foreign influence.

'No Cooperation'

Goulding told newsmen there would be no cooperation in the future between his faction and the provisionals in an all-out campaign against the British army. He said there had been joint action in the fighting during the past week in Belfast but this had been a local and temporary decision.

There appeared to be some division within the ranks of the "official" wing as well. From Belfast, United Press International reported that a spokesman for the "official" faction held a news conference saying the IRA would execute any British soldier captured from now on.

The spokesman produced a 17-year-old English deserter from the Royal Irish Rangers who was captured Friday night.

The spokesman said the youth, identified as Thomas Moore of Keighley, Yorkshire, "was granted a reprieve on certain conditions," among these was that he deliver the execution notice to the British army commander, Gen. Harry Tuzo.

Sen. Scott for Wage-Price Board to Help Curb Inflation

Washington (UP) — Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said Saturday a wage-price review board "is becoming more and more necessary" to help curb inflation.

"I think we could use a wage-price review board to set a limitation on how much wages and prices should increase over a period of time," he said.

At the same time Scott said he expects the economy to be the chief issue in next year's elections and added if President Nixon is to win reelection, he'll have to win the fight against inflation.

So far Nixon has rejected establishment of any wage-price control mechanism, but shortly before Congress recessed earlier this month 13 Republican senators introduced legislation to create a commission to set wage and price guidelines.

Scott was not one of the 13, but he noted Nixon reacted by saying that "he's willing to consider a wage-price review board if the hearings justify it."

"I hope they will, because I'd like to see my move in that direction," said Scott in a taped interview for use on radio and television stations in Pennsylvania.

The Senate Banking Committee has scheduled hearings on the legislation in October.

Scott, interviewed by college interns working in his office this summer, also said in answer to a question that he doesn't think the seven-point Vietnam peace plan advanced by the Communists at the Paris talks is dead.

On the contrary, negotiations are "very much alive" with Nixon pursuing every single channel privately. "You might get an announcement almost any time," Scott said.

Strategic Air Command: Primed for Nuclear Holocaust, Hoping Never to Use It

The official defense of the B1 is that it is a must to continue the nation's "triad" defense into the 1980s. The Russians have the same scheme involving manned bombers, land-based missiles and submarine-fired missiles. Each system has its strengths and weaknesses. Diversity is needed, Holloway says, because while one form of attack could knock out possibly one or two systems, the cost of ensuring that all three were destroyed would be prohibitive even if technology were available for this.

It is Holloway who has the power to launch SAC's bombers complete with nuclear weapons into airborne holding patterns ready for a strike inside the Soviet Union. Only the president can authorize the strike, but such an airborne deployment would be "virtually certain to escape a nuclear attack." There is no such option with the missiles. These can be fired only on the president's order and once launched can neither be destroyed in flight nor defused by anyone in the United States.

The missile's key weakness is not its reability but what is reckoned to be certain confusion in Washington should a Soviet strike be launched. The missiles are in hardened silos, but many are certain to be destroyed in any first strike. The first strike is considered a certain advantage of the Soviet Union since it is assumed that no president could make up his mind to all-out nuclear war in the 15 minutes between the time the first Soviet missiles are spotted on radar until they burst in awesome mushroom clouds over the United States. "It's a terrible decision to make," Holloway says. "I wouldn't want to bet all my pay that the decision would be made" before the first salvo hits, he adds.

Yet critics say, the United States has some 1,000 Air Force missiles, about half soon to be capable of carrying more than one nuclear weapon in their warheads, nearly 500 bombers including the new supersonic FB11, and 41 nuclear submarines each with 16 missiles and some of these MIRV-designed (multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicles). The present arsenal probably could destroy the Soviet Union four or five times over as a viable industrial power.

Impossibility

True, says the Air Force, but only assuming all U.S. missiles and bombers got through, which SAC men say is impossible.

The Soviet Union has, the Pentagon says, from 5 to 20 times the radar, interceptors and ground-to-air missiles deployed by the United States. It clearly leads in antiballistic missile missiles.

Offensively, the Soviet team includes half again as many intercontinental ballistic missiles, a new swing wing bomber, the Backfire which is twice as large as the FB11, and a growing submarine fleet soon to threaten the supremacy of the U.S. Polaris fleet. Intelligence says the Soviet Union may boost its ICBM force to double the size of the American fleet by the mid-1970s but such "perhaps" type intelligence often has proved faulty in the past. One source said the Soviet Union, with its monster bombs, probably has more than double the megatonnage of the United States which brings it up to a combined total of home 10,000 pounds of TNT for each of us here on earth. World War II city "blockbusters" weighed 2,000 pounds and up.

Although many in SAC including Holloway talk about the need for absolute superiority over the Soviet Union, Brig. Gen. Laurence Steinkraus, director of SAC's command control, the underground head of the doomsday machine, says this may not be necessary. "What is needed is to have a sufficiency that will maintain a deterrence. The day to guard against is the day when the Russians know they can stop enough of SAC to survive" a U.S. counterblow.

For all the talk, planning and billions spent on SAC, it is perhaps odd that officially the United States does not believe there will be a nuclear war. Instead there is expected to be a continuous weighing and evaluating by each superpower of the other's strategic forces.

"We forced the Russians out of Cuba because we had an edge of four or five to one in the nuclear field. Today we're about equal, with the Russians slightly ahead. But what happens in 5 or 10 years if the Russians have a clear margin and something like the Berlin or Cuban crisis blows up again?" one source said.

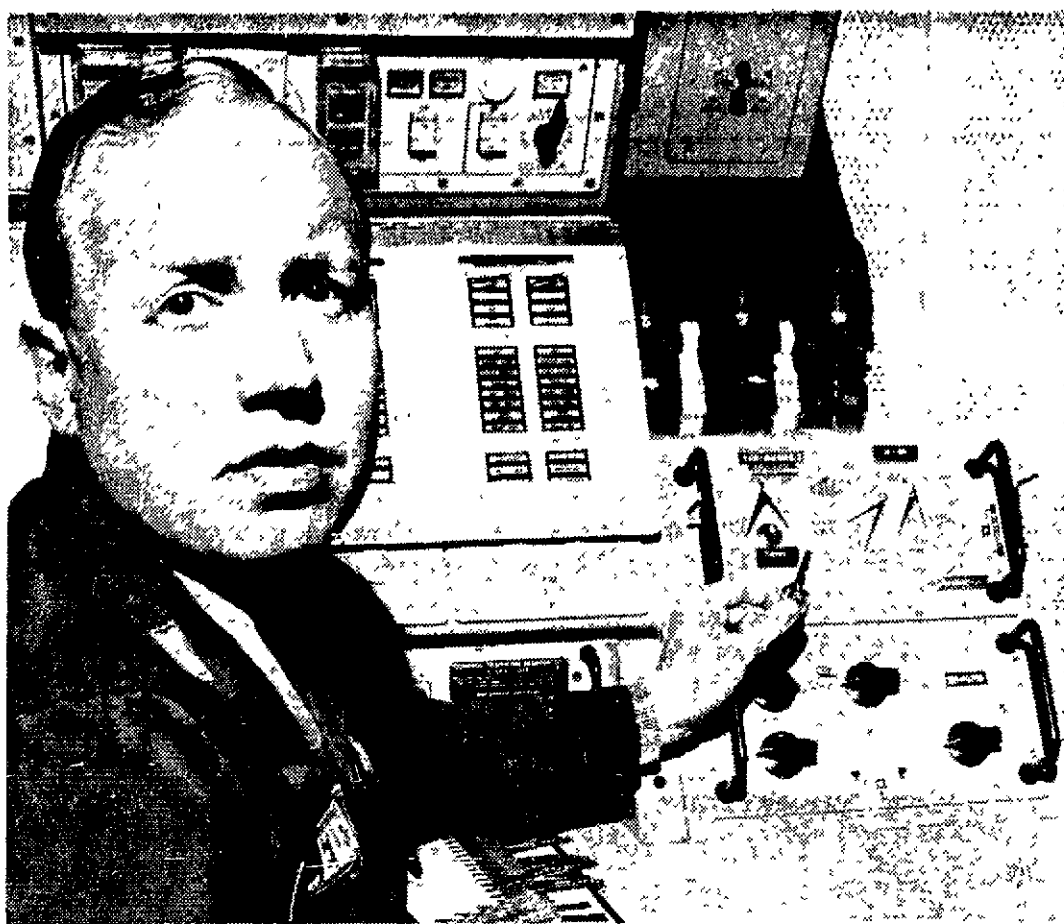

Holloway foresees no war — ever. "The Russians want the wealth of the United States. The last thing they want is to destroy it."

SAC Chief

A World War II fighter ace, Holloway has devoted his adult life to war and the planning for war. Besides commanding SAC, he heads the Joint Strategic Target Planning Staff, which decides for all the services just what points in the Soviet Union should be vaporized under fireballs of millions of degrees of heat intensity and inundated in lethal fallout. Meaningful disarmament would more or less undo the massive machinery he heads. On the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT) now going on with the Soviet Union he says: "There is great hope for the reduction of nuclear armaments. It is the real hope of the future. Salt is all important. But (in the interim) we must maintain a credible position of relative strength so SALT has a chance of success."

For all the billions Americans have poured into SAC's hardware, it still is an organization of men rather than machines.

Says one senior officer, "The United States has no strategic deterrent without human beings to fly planes and man the missile capsules."

Capt. John Dereshy holds a key needed to activate the launch apparatus of his control panel at the missile site 75 miles southwest of Minot, N.D.

The Air Force has escaped many of the discipline problems plaguing the Army due to Vietnam and other reasons. Personnel officials believe this is largely because all Air Force men are volunteers although many enlist to escape the draft and Army and because of higher intelligence standards demanded of recruits.

Although no one officially wants to say so, SAC also appears to have come to an accommodation of sorts with the new generation through better housing, maids to clean barrack halls and latrines, more permissive haircuts and ends to other holdovers from strictly disciplined military days. To the young whose peers often abhor war, SAC gives a liberal dose of Soviet threat lectures, with the emphasis not on the infantryman's creed of kill without question when ordered, but on "peace through strength."

Newer signs of the times include occasional peace symbols, booze in the enlisted barracks and a feeling that if marijuana use is not all that flagrant, possibly nothing will be said.

It all is a far cry from the days of Gen. Curtis LeMay, a cigar chomper and drag racing buff who brought SAC into prominence during the height of the cold war in the 1950s. Outspoken, flamboyant and sternly intolerant of dissent or even embarrassing questions, LeMay built a no-nonsense doomsday machine that crushed the careers of the weak, made overkill a political concept and made ulcers and divorce an uncomfortably common way of life for SAC men. He is still credited by some as building singlehandedly such an awesome machine of absolute violence that Big War becomes unthinkable.

All Watched

SAC has a human reliability program that amounts to Big Brother and small watching everyone who deals with nuclear weaponry or fits into the nation's war plan, about half of the command's 164,000 officers and men. Last year some 50 officers were relieved of sensitive jobs as were 200 airmen. The most common cause among the officers was doubt about the morality of SAC and nuclear warfare or a belief that should the time come they could not throw the switch or turn the key or issue the orders that would rain nuclear fireballs over the Soviet Union and its satellites.

One authoritative source said, "It is extremely infrequent that a man cracks up in a (missile) capsule and he has to be dragged out." Most of the airmen were disqualified for "immaturity," a catchall phrase that covers just about anything.

Drugs, too, play a role not only in men being pulled off sensitive jobs but in maintaining SAC's fine cutting edge. Officials say SAC has a problem with drugs but far less so than the Army.

No drug statistics for SAC were given, but an Air Force Assn. publication said service-wide last year, investigations of hard drug use had risen some 23% and those for marijuana were up about 13%. The magazine, Air Force and Space Digest, said the investigations represented only the tip of the iceberg.

Besides guarding against America's potential enemies, SAC guards against another foe—psychological aberrations that may not show up until some critical moment. One general called it "legislating against insanity." In the SAC control room all operations personnel are armed, not against foreign agents and the like, but against each other in case someone wants to start World War III or wants to prevent it once ordered. There are numerous "no lone zones" where at least two men must be present.

But there is another side of the fail-safe problem, how to insure that an attack will be carried out by a shattered United States after an enemy's first strike. "Thus four missileers, none higher than captain, could fire 50 missiles from two electronically-linked launch control sites. At each site two men would have to turn their keys setting up a strike within two seconds of each other. If two centers "vote" for a strike, the weapons could be salvaged in seconds and full-scale nuclear war, if not already ordered, would certainly be under way in minutes.

Safety Insured

Each man in the missile launch site also is armed, again against his companion. SAC says to date no man has ever inserted his key in the firing control panel. If anyone did, the key would be locked in place by a special machine and could be removed only by a special maintenance team, accompanied no doubt by a heavily armed Air Police squad.

As SAC looks into the future, with continued cuts in men, money and research for America's conventional forces, its role in backing up the nation's diplomacy grows apace. If America's strategic forces become demonstrably inferior in quality and number, then in some future major faceoff between the nuclear superpowers, it seems possible to some that a U.S. president may be forced to choose between buckling or opting for a preventive war. This would mean Washington launching the first strike, something every U.S. president in the nuclear age has disavowed.

Is there already such a contingency plan? No one at SAC or the Pentagon will say, although one officer noted there are contingency plans for almost any event.

Although little is said about it, SAC several times has been ordered during world crises into the preliminary steps toward nuclear war. The Cuban missile crisis in 1962 saw things go as far toward holocaust as at any time in history. "I was on alert during Cuba," one crewman recalled. "I was scared, really scared. There was a real atmosphere of fear."

A qualified source said, "SAC has been on the line in every crisis although only during Cuba was there an airborne alert (with planes carrying bombs and missiles in the air poised for a strike against the Soviet Union)."

How many times the Soviet Union and the United States have not been plunged into serious crises because of America's nuclear big stick probably will never be known. The possibilities for future crises if SAC is weakened vis-a-vis the Soviet Union are high, the administration believes.

'Damned Worried'

Rubbing an index finger over a plastic model of a jet fighter on his office coffee table recently, Holloway said: "You know, I'm damn worried about the future. I don't sleep very well thinking of a future with the Soviet Union holding a (strategic) strength edge."

Plastic models of American aircraft and missiles adorn offices throughout the Air Force. The one on Holloway's table was different. It was constructed from what intelligence could gather on the Soviet Union's latest twin jet fighter which, if world reason fails, may one day rise on twin cones of fire to seek out and destroy as much of SAC as possible.

Pamela 'Just Wanted Place in Band'

Birmingham, Ala. (AP) — Pamela Davis, the 15-year-old girl whose school assignment has become the center of a school desegregation controversy, says the race of her classmates isn't what led her to ask for a transfer from a court-assigned black school.

although a federal court desegregation plan had directed she attend a black school

A local school official Saturday said Pamela was assigned to the black school because of an error in records.

The transfer to the school of her choice has been approved, he said.

Pamela's mother, Mrs. Robert E. Price, said she was surprised Wallace took action.

Mrs. Price said she has received calls from across the nation since Wallace stepped in.

"They say they are proud of me because I am standing up for what is right. They also are proud of Gov. Wallace," she said.

"I feel like Gov. Wallace is a sort of god; he's an answer to a prayer," Mrs. Price said, adding that if he runs for president not only will she vote for him . . . "I'll get out and campaign for him."

Goldwater Warns of Soviet Gains

San Diego, Calif. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Saturday the world balance of military power has shifted to the Soviet Union to such an extent that international nuclear blackmail is no longer impossible.

Goldwater said that while the Soviet Union is engaging in strategic arms limitation talks with the United States in Helsinki, it is "quietly but urgently engaging in the most massive military buildup the world has ever known."

speech prepared for the 10th annual reunion of the American Fighter Aces Assn.

He said the Soviet Union now has superior defenses, is pushing its offensive capability to a point of massive superiority and is "driving to build the world's finest technological base from which to expand their military research and development programs."

"I am saying we are no longer in a position of parity with the Soviets," Goldwater said. "I am saying that the United States is well on its way to becoming a second rate power incapable of assuring the future security and freedom of its people."

he said, "the time may come when this country may have to watch every little thing it does to make sure it doesn't annoy the leaders of the Kremlin."

In light of the Soviet buildup, he said, "It is not beyond reason... to expect the Soviet Union to confront us with a direct or implied ultimatum within the next three years."

Gallup Poll: South More Livable for Blacks Than Elsewhere

Princeton, N.J. — By the ratio of 5-to-3, Americans agree with the recent statement by James H. Meredith, the first Negro to enter the University of Mississippi, that "on a person-to-person, day-to-day basis, the South is a more livable place for blacks than any other place in the nation."

Nationally, blacks and whites hold closely comparable views. How persons of each race feel about Meredith's statement, however, depends to some degree on where they live. Members of each race in the South are more inclined to agree with Meredith than are their Northern counterparts

Roughly half of blacks in the North think the South is the most "livable" place in the nation. This is an important finding to bear in mind in speculating about the future pattern of black migration.

In conducting the survey, 1,532 persons 18 and older were interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected communities across the nation during the period July 16-19. This was asked:

James Meredith recently said that on a person-to-person, day-to-day basis, the South is a more livable place for blacks than any other place in the nation. Do you agree or disagree?

South More 'Livable'?
	Agree	Disagree	No Opin.
NATIONAL	49	30	21
Whites	49	30	21
Blacks	48	30	22
East	42	34	24
Midwest	50	36	14
South	63	18	19
West	36	33	31

Analysis of the findings further shows that persons 50 and over are more inclined to agree with Meredith's statement than are persons under 50 years of age. Republicans tend to support Meredith's opinion slightly more than do Democrats interviewed in the survey.

In an interview Meredith said there still was "racial animosity" in the South, but the atmosphere was "significantly better" than it was a decade ago.

Gallup surveys provide at least some evidence to support this contention.

Six out of every ten white parents in the South in 1963 said they would object to sending their children to schools where Negroes are enrolled. In a 1970 Gallup survey only about one white parent in six in the South offered an objection.

Similarly dramatic declines have been recorded over the last decade in the proportion of Southern whites who would object to: voting for a black for president, intermarriage between blacks and whites, and having blacks move into their neighborhood.

Televised Education

A lot of college graduates are discovering that a doctor's, master's or bachelor's degree is no longer a sure path to the kind of job they'd like. But no one has yet questioned the value of a high school diploma.

If the holder of an advanced degree has little advantage in today's employment market, the young person who lacks a diploma is at a distinct disadvantage. Many employers won't even consider an applicant who hasn't finished high school.

For this reason, "TV High School," due to be launched next month, may prove to be one of the greatest services the Nebraska Educational Television Network has offered.

The series of 60 programs is aimed at preparing persons for a general educational development (GED) certificate, equivalent to a high school diploma. Courses will be offered free on ETV three times a week, including repeats, and supplementary material can be obtained from the State Education Department for a reasonable fee. At the end of a series of lessons, students can take the GED test at one of the 28 adult education centers in the state.

An immense potential exists for the TV High School. Some 400,000 Nebraskans, educators estimate, lack a high school diploma. As many as 10,000 to 11,000 are expected to make use of the TV courses. If only a percentage of them go on to get GED certificates, there would still be a significant increase over the 544 issued last year.

The result, of course, would be many persons who are more employable and a citizenry that is better educated. Both individuals and the state as a whole would benefit.

One doesn't have to be employment-oriented to derive value from the courses, however. A variety of subjects will be covered — English, mathematics, natural sciences, literature, social studies. They can enrich the life of anyone, regardless of the goal.

Whither Neb and Raska?

When they entered the service of the state, those bovine ambassadors of goodwill, Neb and Raska, probably never foresaw that they would end up as surplus equipment, consigned to the auction block along with used cars and other vehicles.

But there's little room for sentiment in state government. Economy is the watchword at the Capitol these days, and taxpayers are more organized than animals. It is, one is tempted to say, a classic example of whose ox is gored.

Nothing says individual Nebraskans can't indulge sentiment, however. There's no reason somebody can't buy Neb and Raska (there's two of each, four oxen in all) and insure a fitting future for them.

Monte Montana Jr., for instance, says he will bid on the two teams with hopes of adding them to his Buffalo Bill Wild West Show.

Assuming Neb and Raska would like to remain in show biz, this would be fine.

On the other hand, the oxen may figure they've served the state long and well, marching in parades, showing up at festivals, posing for photographs, and now figure they deserve to spend their declining years lolling in green pastures beside cool waters.

Probably, in a figurative sense, this is the dream of every state employe.

Along with Mr. Montana, then, it would be nice if the Aug. 21 auction draws a Sandhills rancher or two who'd like to provide the oxen a decent retirement home. Or an angel who'd like to buy Neb and Raska and present them to a zoo.

But if anyone who deals in hamburger or dog food is thinking of showing up at the auction, he should be warned that he'll do so at his own peril.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Talking to the Plants

By DICK WEST

Washington — Earlier this summer I wrote a column about a man who tells jokes to tomato plants to test whether they have a sense of humor.

Since then I have learned that the question of whether plants have emotions has inspired a number of other experiments.

For instance, when I was in Oklahoma on a speaking trip recently, a lady told me she had some cucumber vines that were drooping rather badly.

After reading of the tomato tickling project, she tried to revitalize the cucumbers by talking to them each time she watered them. But they died anyway.

"What did you say to them?" I asked.

"I told them to 'shape up or ship out.'"

That, obviously, was the wrong thing to have said to a cucumber.

Despite their rough exteriors, cucumbers are extremely sensitive and get their feelings hurt rather easily. They would never respond to an ultimatum of that sort.

You might be able to bullyrag a butterbean bush, but a good rule of thumb when growing cucumbers is: If you can't say something nice, don't say anything.

This is the danger of dealing with plants on an emotional basis. You never quite know what to say to them.

Some day seed catalogs may carry instructions for perking up plants psychologically. Pending additional research, however, proceed at your own risk.

As a substitute for verbal stimulation, you might want to try playing a record album titled "Music to Grow Plants."

Its producers claim the sound waves will cause tiny apertures in the plant leaves to remain open longer, thus increasing the intake of carbon dioxide and other goodies from the air.

As I understand it, however, the music was composed primarily to appeal to African violets, which, as you may know, are great Lawrence Welk fans.

Plants of that temperament may very well be turned on by the album. But if you happen to be growing plants that are botanical swingers (orchids, for example), you might do better to expose them to Three Dog Night or some other rock group.

Also bear in mind some plants tend to be rather moody. Exposure to a jazz number when they are in a sentimental mood could leave them emotionally disturbed.

And when you've got a neurotic carnation on your hands, you've got problems.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK'S Opinion

The Necessity to Pause

Washington — The truth of the matter, for good or ill, is that only a handful of thinking conservatives can be found at high levels of the government in Washington today. One of these is Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, who delivered himself last month of a speech fully packed with sound conservative doctrine.

Speaking to the National Petroleum Council, Stans turned around on a single unpopular theme: The wisdom of thoughtful delay. He offered as a watchword for our impatient times this brief, unglamorous counsel: "Wait a minute."

Such advice, of course, is calculated to drive professional liberals up the nearest wall. Ralph Nader was so vexed that he took to television to demand that Stans be demoted, fired, impeached and hanged, though not necessarily in that order. Nader's particular gripe was that Stans had urged the Environmental Protection Agency to wait a minute before promulgating a set of guidelines to the states under the Air Quality Act.

Now, it is not true, as Nader charged, that Stans was responsible for burying these guidelines in some bureaucratic dungeon; in point of fact, EPA had issued its guidelines on the Wednesday before Nader popped off on Sunday. But it was quite true that Stans had sharply criticized the EPA proposals as both inflexible and premature. The whole affair offers an excellent example of what Stans was getting at in his speech last month.

The Air Quality Act is not widely understood. The law's purpose is to reduce or eliminate air pollution. Fine. But the achievement of this purpose potentially could involve the federal government in the exercise of breathtaking powers. The act contemplates social engineering on a grand scale, controlling the location of factories, the consumption of fuel, even the permissible use of our cars. In the holy name of "ending air pollution," we may yet suffocate in a fog of rules and regulations.

Stans sought to make two points — first, that many threshold questions of technology have yet to be answered; second, that however laudable the act's general purpose may be, in particular cases the reduction or elimination of air pollution involves social, economic and political questions that may not yield to sweeping "national guidelines."

Both points are valid. The very measurement and definition of air pollutants — on which all else depends — still is a most uncertain art. No one yet knows quite how to construct a model to determine what actually happens to air in a particular area.

Beyond these technological questions are social and economic issues. Let us suppose a particular factory is emitting pollutants unacceptable under federal air quality guidelines. Let us further suppose that the capital cost of correcting the problem would render the operation unprofitable. Do you then order the factory closed and thus throw a thousand husbands and fathers out of work?

"Wait a minute," says Stans. It is wise counsel in other fields as well.

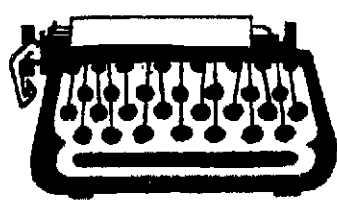

Throughout the South, urban school systems are being destroyed because courts and bureaucrats will not pause before decreeing the busing of white and black children to achieve racial balance. The use of phosphate detergents is about to be legislated out of existence before workable substitutes have been marketed. Two years hence, all our new cars may have protective "air bags," providing the most doubtful protection. In countless areas of complex cuisine, we demand answers in terms of instant potatoes.

A large part of the conservative philosophy is predicated upon the truth that some things can't be hurried. William F. Buckley has defined our role. The conservative's function, when change is proposed, is to defend the status quo and to ask that the change be justified. The liberal's function, by contrast, is to defend the change and to ask that the status quo be abandoned. These are equally useful functions. It is the tension between them that keeps us going.

Stricter Gun Control Laws?

Provocative
Topic in News

The debate over gun control continues, intensified by each new outbreak of violence, the gunning down of a policeman, a man with a rifle going berserk. Here are the views of a gun control supporter, Patrick W. Murphy, New York City police commissioner, and an opponent, Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., a retired major general and one of Congress' most ardent voices against gun laws.

Yes!

By PATRICK V. MURPHY
For The Associated Press

What wife would place a $50,000 value on her husband's life? What child would regard any amount of money as a substitute for his father? These questions need no answer for no person can place a price tag on the life of a loved one.

Recently after a widely publicized White House conference summoned to discuss ways of coping with the wave of police shootings, the single suggestion advanced by the federal officials who presided was a proposal for federal legislation authorizing a $50,000 payment to the family of any policeman slain in the line of duty.

The causes of violence in our society, including violence directed at police officers, are indeed complex; and tragic slayings of policemen will not be eliminated as long as crime, tension, and bitterness survive. But there is one step that can be taken immediately to reduce the level of violence and the number of lethal confrontations, both with policemen and with other law-abiding citizens.

More stringent controls ordained by the federal government over the manufacture, distribution and sale of handguns and parts for handguns are vitally necessary if there is to be a serious and sincere effort to protect the lives of citizens, including policemen.

The Nixon Administration, however, has reiterated firm opposition to any new controls on handguns. In fact, Attorney General John Mitchell was quoted after the White House conference as saying that the 1968 Gun Control Act, a modest compromise piece of legislation, should be given more time "to be implemented and tested to determine whether or not it is serving the best purposes of this country."

Studied, Restudied

The time has long passed for such grudging deliberation. This question has been studied and restudied, and each time the conscientious conclusion has been the same:

—In 1967, the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice — The Katzenbach Commission — called for registration of all handguns, rifles and shotguns, permits to carry handguns, and the prohibition of interstate sales of handguns.

—In 1968, the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders — The Kerner Commission — called for federal, state and local controls on handguns. It supported tight federal legislation.

—In 1969, the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence — the Eisenhower Commission — called for restrictive licensing of handguns through federal legislation if states failed to enact their own laws within a minimum time period.

—In 1971, the National Commission on the Reform of Federal Criminal Laws — the Brown Commission — called for a ban on the production and possession of, and trafficking in, handguns.

How many more widows must bury their husbands, policemen and private citizens alike, before it is clear whether disarming criminals and potential criminals serves the "best purposes" of this country?

Make no mistake about it. The handgun is at the core of violence in inclining people toward a deadly response to a situation and providing the means for drastic action.

Over 200,000 gun crimes are committed in this country each year. The Eisenhower Commission found that two-thirds of all homicides, one-third of all robberies and one-fifth of all aggravated assaults are committed with a firearm — usually a handgun. Nearly 3,000 Americans die every year from firearm accidents alone.

In 1970, in New York City, there were 1,117 homicides committed, 468 of them involving handguns. Significantly, none of the handguns was licensed. The same pattern applies across the country. Across the country about 15,000 murders were committed; more than half of these acts were done by handgun.

Cities like New York reap the harvest of weak national gun control laws; 65% of the pistols seized in this city come from outside the state, thus virtually nullifying the strict provisions of New York's Sullivan Law.

The need for effective national laws becomes clearer every day. Eight policemen have been killed in the line of duty this year in New York City, one more than last last year. Seven were shot to death with pistols. In the first five months of this year 32 other policemen were shot and wounded. In all last year there were only 45.

In 1970, in the nation at large, 100 police officers were killed, 83 of them were shot to death, with handguns used in 73 of the killings. Already this year, 56 officers have been killed, 45 of them with pistols. Of the 717 law enforcement officers killed since 1960, 535 were murdered with handguns.

The Game Is Life

Nowhere else in the world are people permitted willy nilly to amass caches of arms and ammunition without difficulty, and nowhere else in the world does the rattle of illegal guns reach such enormous proportions.

Do we as a people really abhor violence? We are obviously concerned about crime. But to what extent? Perhaps our feelings about violence are not as strong as we think.

For too long we have indulged the gun maniacs. The name of the game is human life, and it is a game we dare not play. The stakes are too high for an advanced society which values human life above all other considerations.

What we need is the urgent concern of both legislative and executive branches of the federal government to provide us with the tools that will enable the police to choke off the sources of the basic instruments of violence in our society. This is a program for direct action designed to protect our police officers and the communities they serve.

Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes (top) and Patrick V. Murphy, New York Police commissioner, argue whether laws should be strengthened to control guns like the .22 caliber revolvers at right, imported by a Florida firm, sold for less than $20 and referred to as "Saturday night specials."

No!

By ROBERT L. F. SIKES
For The Associated Press

Antigun voices again are being raised in the land. There are the hysterical outcries of those who want to abolish private ownership of weapons. There also are the voices of distressed police officials disturbed at the ever growing problems of crime.

It is well to recall that the 1968 Gun Control Act was presented as a major step toward the curtailment of crime. Yet, since the enactment of that measure, the crime rate has continued to soar.

Subsequently, in the nation's capital, the city government approved some of the stiffest antigun ordinances in the nation. Despite this, no one can argue there has been a significant improvement in the crime situation in the city of Washington.

It is highly regrettable, but there have been a number of recent cases where policemen on duty were killed with guns. The antigun elements always seize on these incidents to begin their chant for more repressive legislation. They ignore the antigun law already in affect and say the times have changed and therefore, we need new gun control laws. In some way they continue to reason that crime will drop if guns are more stringently controlled.

Generally, there are three categories of people who own weapons:

—Police, security guards, and others in like category.

—By far the largest group is those who own weapons for the protection of their families and homes and for sporting purposes or as collectors.

—Criminals also own guns.

Clearly, the only weapons owners who would feel the brunt of stricter antigun legislation would be the millions of Americans who own weapons for the protection of their homes and families or for sport or as collectors. Restrictions upon this group would not be a deterrent to crime in the slightest.

Nor will more stringent gun controls stop ownership or weapons by the criminal. The chances are his weapon was stolen or purchased on the black market. Anyone with sound reason knows that any gun owner intent on crime is not going to rush to this nearest police station to register his weapon.

Facts Obscured

The cold, clear facts do not support the contention that licensing and registering weapons, or limiting the ownership of weapons to police and military will automatically reduce crime.

What has occurred during debate of this highly emotional issue is that the true facts have too often been obscured from the American people who have been told that guns make criminals and that antigun laws will control crime. Just how prohibitive legislation of this type can be is best demonstrated in New York which has the nation's toughest gun laws.

According to an April, 1971, report from a high ranking New York City official, there are a total of 24,354 pistol licenses in force, of which 564 are issued to persons who do not require them as a condition of employment. Thus, out of a city of over eight million people, 564 legal permits for handguns have been issued. When one considers that New York has a murder rate of almost double the national average, it is clear that even the tough gun laws has had little effect toward curbing crime. States with no restrictions on weapons ownership are among the lowest in crime rate.

Congress has passed new laws to deal with virtually every feature of the crime problem. Congress has appropriated hundreds of millions of dollars to assist the states and local communities in fighting crime. But crime continues to grow.

Until we are ready to attack the real root causes of crime — poverty, illiteracy, lack of economic opportunity, discrimination, outdated judicial machinery, inadequate enforcement of existing laws, and disregard for authority and order — we shall not find the answer to crime. But the immediate need is for law enforcement.

There should be greater efforts to apprehend criminals, a speedup in court processes, tougher bail procedures. The habitual criminal knows that if he is apprehended, which is unlikely, and if he is brought to trial, which may take years, he is more likely to receive a slap on the wrist than a harsh sentence. In that kind of an atmosphere crime is good business.

Revision Needed?

Firearms laws, no matter how stringent or comprehensive, are not going to stop crime with weapons. The 1968 Gun Control Act was intended to help keep weapons out of the hands of criminals, unsupervised juveniles, drug addicts and those mentally irresponsible. The act is comparatively new.

It has not in reality been thoroughly tested. It may need revision in order to achieve the greatest effectiveness. One serious weakness has just been dramatized by the shooting of a collector of black powder weapons by Internal Revenue service agents. They broke into his home without proper warrants and without uniforms and shot the individual when he resisted.

On the other hand, it is possible there are features of the act which should be strengthened. Consideration could well be given to outlawing the so-called junk handgun. These are cheap, foreign imports which can be bought along most highways.

The loud voices which claim stricter antigun laws offer a simple solution to crime in America are misleading the public. Taking guns from law-abiding citizens will not end crime. Firearm laws, no matter how restrictive or comprehensive, are not in themselves an answer to social maladies. The millions of law-abiding Americans who own guns for legitimate purposes will be the only ones stung by additional anti gun laws. The criminals would retain their weapons just as they have done under the 1968 Gun Control Act.

It is not guns but criminals that commit crime. It is criminals that should be controlled.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

With summer crops ripening quickly and Nebraskans bracing themselves for a busy harvest season, Nebraska editors were already in the midst of their own harvest season last week, reaping editorial opinions on no fault insurance, paralyzing strikes, youth representation on civic boards, and new leadership at the university level.

The Omaha World-Herald spoke out editorially on no-fault insurance, and the need for machinery to end strikes that can paralyze a nation.

On no-fault insurance the Herald urged the state to proceed slowly studying all aspects of the proposal.

"Perhaps the strongest argument for going more slowly is that we do not really know where we are going and that the no-fault system may have flaws which would become apparent if it were tested for a longer period in a few states.

"It is a good argument, but rising insurance costs are making many people willing and impatient to try what appears to be a less expensive form of protection."

On recent discussion by Congress to end economy damaging strikes the Herald said:

"When a strike threatens to paralyze the economy, as a general rail strike would do, or when public health or safety are threatened, there should be machinery for settling the dispute. And the machinery should not be a special act of Congress passed when the situation becomes intolerable . . . This problem can be solved, and should be solved."

With younger voter ages, comes the question of youth voter representation on civic boards. The Syracuse Journal-Democrat editorialized in favor of youth members on boards saying:

"Giving youth some real responsibility for the town would encourage them to contribute to its well being even more than they do now. This would be especially helpful if the city could tap their energy and young ideas. New ideas would be available, and if we are to last til Centennial II we'll need new ideas."

The Tri-City Tribune commented on the forced resignation of Dr. Kirk Naylor as president of the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

The Tribune said perhaps the resignation might eventually result in new leadership that would mean a better understanding between recently combined University of Nebraska at Lincoln and UNO. The Tribune said:

"There is a place for UNO in the state University system. But the administrators of that institution and the leaders of that city should be willing — and grateful — to stay in that place and not use a rule or ruin approach to the entire system."

"Removal of Dr. Naylor as UNO president should go part way in accomplishing this goal. But it will take some alteration in the traditional Omaha point of view to make the new system entirely effective."

Nixon Urged to Call Meeting on Busing

Raleigh, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott urged President Nixon on Saturday to call a meeting of key school officials to discuss busing of school children to achieve desegregation.

Scott said in a statement that he had wired the President urging him "to call to Washington immediately various key school officials from state, city and county levels to discuss personally and thoroughly with them what he has in mind."

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that busing is a constitutional means to achieve school integration, and the Nixon administration is seeking $1.5 billion to help ease problems in desegregation. But President Nixon has declared that none of the $1.5 billion would be used for busing.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace called on Nixon Friday to order a halt to all school busing for desegregation purposes. Wallace also defied federal court desegregation orders closing a black school and assigning a white pupil to a black school.

Scott noted that as a result of statements made by the President and others "much confusion exists in the minds of parents, school officials and administrators as to what should be done and can be done under the law."

New York (UPI) — The mellow bleat of King Curtis' "Soul Saxophone" was silenced forever early Saturday when the 36-year-old recording star was killed in a struggle over a knife.

Police said Curtis was stabbed in the heart in a scuffle with 26-year-old John Montanez in front of a West Side apartment house Curtis owned. The alleged assailant was hospitalized in "fair to poor" condition with two knife wounds in the back.

Curtis, born Curtis Ousley in Fort Worth, Tex., joined Lionel Hampton's band after graduating from high school. He later came to New York and became one of the city's busiest sideman, backing up such singers as Nat King Cole, Bobby Darin and Andy Williams.

No Altitude Too High For Madison Avenue

(c) Newhouse News Service
New York — The jumbo jets levels off at 39,000 feet, the passengers slip on their headphones, lean back in their seats, look up at the overhead screen and watch a commercial.

A commercial?
A commercial.

If a New York film and music packaging company has its way, the stratosphere won't be high enough to escape Madison Avenue's blandishments for everything from aspirin to xylophones.

And there's even a possibility that the Marlboro man and his cigaret-puffing sidekicks — banned from earthbound TV last year — could come back like ghostriders in the sky.

The firm trying to peddle ads to the airlines — and trains and buses as well — is the TransCom Corp., headquartered a block off New York's Madison Avenue. TransCom has come up with a new cassette-based movie system that allows commercials to be dropped in by a stewardess before, after, or in the middle of a film.

"We've come up with a better mousetrap," says Seymour R. Berman, TransCom's programming director. "We've discussed it with a number of airlines, and they are interested in trying it."

Even without commercials, Berman claims, TransCom's system is cheaper and better than present systems under which a ground crew must thread film through an airplane's on-board projectors. That 16-millimeter film breaks and jams easily, he says, and it is virtually impossible to restart it in flight.

TransCom's cassettes, on the other hand, can be dropped into a projector by a stewardess, he said. Berman said the 8-millimeter film is "virtually

Sheep Deaths Probed

Compiled From News Wires
Leadville, Colo. — A sheep rancher said Saturday one of his sheepherders told him an "Army-colored" helicopter flew over one of his herds and sprayed the animals with bullets killing 40 of them.

Irving Beard, Fruita, Colo., said the reported mass slaying occurred shortly after noon on Thursday, but he did not receive word of it until Saturday when his ranch hand, Rod Rodman returned from the mountain pasture.

The U.S. Army, implicated by Beard's allegations, called in investigators. Col. G. D. Barrant, Ft. Carson information officer, said the dead sheep, found clumped under bushes in a meadow were blistered but did not have bullet holes in them.

He said a Ft. Carson veterinarian examined the sheep and said they had been dead for several days, although the cause of their deaths has not been determined.

GI Staffs Produce 'Civilian' Papers

Washington (UPI) — The General Accounting Office (GAO) has learned that some military installations let local businessmen run profit-making newspapers on the bases with GI writers and editors, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Saturday.

Not only are local publishers profiting at the expense of the taxpayer," Proxmire said, "the military readers are getting controlled news in contradiction of Defense Dept. and service regulations concerning civilian enterprise publications."

Proxmire said in a statement that at his request the GAO examined the arrangements under which unofficial newspapers on military bases are published. The study covered 6 bases and 185 civilian enterprise papers. About 750 armed forces papers were not included.

Under these "civilian enterprise publications," the contractor often pays the printing costs and sells advertising and often an all-military staff gathers and writes the news and puts the paper together.

"Uncle Sam is paying the costs of writing and editing civilian-published newspapers for military bases," Proxmire said.

Regulations State

Proxmire said the GAO pointed out: defense and military service regulations say a civilian enterprise publication is not subject to military control over its content.

Yet Army regulations say each commander must determine whether stories of antiwar demonstrations or other disturbances, the GAO said, "may interfere with the successful accomplishment of his mission or affect morale and discipline within his command."

Military regulations says military or defense civilian workers "may not serve on the editorial staff nor may their names be placed in the masthead" of the publications. Yet, the GAO said, "at one base the civilian enterprise newspaper's entire content, with the exception of the advertisements, was compiled by military personnel."

Although the publications cannot say they are official, authorized armed forces publications, one "base guide" was headed with the name of the base and had no subhead saying it was unofficial.

On some bases, information staff members got defense awards for their work on the newspapers. The GAO said this seems "inconsistent with the disclaimer required by defense regulations that the publisher is in no way connected with the Department of Defense."

The GAO recommended that the Pentagon check its contracts with the civilian publishers and get as much money out of them as "practicable for its services." The GAO also questioned the extent to which GIs are working on the papers' staffs.

Pay Staffs

Proxmire said civilian publishers should pay for the staffs that do the work on the papers and should "be allowed to do their jobs unfettered." He said military censorship over the papers should be ended.

"The First Amendment does not contain an exception for military bases," Proxmire said. "A newspaper that can be censored is no newspaper. It is a propaganda sheet. I believe that personnel of military bases are entitled to free press coverage of news in their communities just as other citizens."

Unsolved Bombings, Killings Plague Officials in Oklahoma

Tulsa, Okla. (UPI)—Like many modest-income Americans, Mr. and Mrs. Don Bolding of nearby Bristow were trying to save money. It cost Mrs. Bolding, a second-grade school teacher, her life.

The teacher, 28, died in the third of a rash of criminal bombings that has plagued law enforcement officers in Oklahoma for two years.

It was one in a series of incidents that has led authorities to speculate that Oklahoma has been invaded by an organized criminal element.

In the last two years, in addition to the killing of Mrs. Bolding, a district judge was critically injured in a bombing; a county prosecutor nearly killed in a similar attack; three grand jury witnesses were murdered; a millionaire rancher shot to death, and a partner in a firm that sold him $15 million in life insurance just months before his death also was killed.

Only two arrests have been made in connection with the incidents. One suspect is awaiting trial in October, and the other is undergoing observation in a state mental hospital.

Lucrative

According to investigators, organized criminals have been installing themselves in lucrative gambling operations that range from taking bets by telephone on football games to running plush, clandestine gambling lounges. It also is said that Oklahoma has become a center for one of the southwest's widest-reaching, richest stolen car and truck operations.

It was in 1969 that the public was first made aware of what was happening. Early that year Bill Bliss was appointed assistant district attorney in Tahlequah in eastern Oklahoma. Six months later he was the target of a bombing.

Authorities believe five men, who were independently operating their own well-to-do gambling and liquor businesses, each contributed $500 to get Bliss out of the way.

On June 26, 1969, Bliss climbed into his pickup truck in front of his home. His two young children were approaching from the house. The young prosecutor turned the ignition key and an explosion shattered the front end of the vehicle. He suffered only minor injuries because investigators said, of poor placement of the bomb.

Bliss today is an associate district judge in the same county. The man suspected of

Attack in Houston

On Aug. 25, 1970, the bombing attacks moved to Tulsa, home of young, ambitious district attorney S. M. Fallis Jr.

District Judge Fredrick S. Nelson, 41, had just climbed into his late-model station wagon in front of his home. It was primary election day and Nelson was seeking reelection.

He turned the ignition, and a bomb planted under the hood went off. The blast threw pieces of the car 300 feet away. The judge was hit at least 40 times in the chest by pieces of torn metal. A gaping hole was torn in the front of Nelson's home.

Judge Nelson is back on the bench, but walking with a cane. Authorities said Nelson was a target for assassination to intimidate Tulsa County law officers.

On Feb. 2, 1971, Mrs. Bolding was killed, as her daughter, Kim, 5, watched from inside the family's home.

The Boldings were trying to save money. He had to commute to his truck-driving job in nearby Stroud and Mrs. Bolding's teaching job was only two blocks away. So, the couple agreed to swap vehicles. Mrs. Bolding would drive the pickup truck and her husband would take the family car—much more economical on gasoline—to his job.

On that morning, Mrs. Bolding stepped into the truck, turned the ignition key and was torn apart by an explosive authorities, described as "next to atomic."

Meant for Husband

Authorities are convinced the bomb was intended for Mrs. Bolding's husband, scheduled to testify against Tahlequah tavern operator Rex Brinlee Jr., 38, three days later in Tulsa. Brinlee was accused of stealing a pickup truck from a Tulsa lot.

The hearing was postponed and Bolding, still recovering from the shock of his wife's murder, did testify. He placed Brinlee at the scene of the theft. Brinlee was sentenced to 4-10 years and is appealing.

The Bolding bombing

shocked the public. Gov. David Hall ordered Atty. Gen. Larry Derryberry to enter the investigation. A special crime-fighting task force was set up. It entered grand jury investigations into the several eastern Oklahoma bombings but the crimes went on.

Mrs. Cleo Epps, 60, well known for her illegal whiskey activities during Oklahoma's prohibition, appeared secretly before one of the grand juries. Three weeks later she disappeared. It was three months before her body, two bullet wounds in the head and stuffed into an empty septic tank on a deserted farm, was found. No arrests have been made.

Arles Delbert Self, 41, construction worker and former state prison inmate, also appeared in secret before the panel. He was being held as a material witness in nearby Creek County and agreed to testify about the bombings in return for his freedom.

Self's freedom was short lived. A few weeks later he was shot in the head as he slept in his one-room apartment. A roommate, who said he slept through the murder, has been charged with the killing. He is undergoing mental observation in a state hospital.

Another Killing

Vernon English, a Stilwell, Okla., produce man named as a suspect in the bombing of Bliss's pickup truck, also appeared before a Tulsa County grand jury. His badly burned body later was found inside a locked tavern in Stilwell. Authorities said the fire was set and though Asst. Dist. Atty. Lloyd Cole said it appeared English was trapped in a fire he tried himself to set, others in the investigation termed his death murder.

In the last two years, five eastern Oklahoma grand juries have investigated criminal activities in the state. One of them, in Tulsa, was credited with breaking up an alleged multimillion-dollar gambling operation, but none got anywhere with the bombings and murders.

Beer-and-Banana Diet Continues

Ypsilanti, Mich. (AP) — Catherine Pipp, 101 years old and full of pep, was doing well Saturday on her self-prescribed daily ration of beer and bananas at Beyer Memorial Hospital.

She was in the hospital for a routine checkup when she asked her doctor for the unusual beer-banana combination. He gave permission for her to have one bottle of beer a day and as many bananas as she wants.

"My late husband was a German so naturally, we had our glass of beer each day, but it never went beyond that," Mrs. Pipp told hospital aides.

"I never really cared for the beer, just the bananas but I'm not about to give them up now," she said.

Her big concern is a daily question, "When can I get out of this bed?" Doctors have given her no answer as yet.

Device May Widen Tests for Retardation in Newborn

Atlanta, Ga. (AP)—Equipment that may some day allow doctors to simultaneously check a dozen blood indicators for signs of mental retardation in babies has been developed by a government biochemist.

Dr. John A. Ambrose, who developed the equipment at the U.S. Center for Disease Control, is now using it to check for two indicators, but he says the testing capacity of the device could be greatly expanded within five years.

The importance of his equipment, Ambrose said is that it will soon be feasible for hospital to easily and quickly check the newborn for the first time for a wide range of signs that indicate various types of retardation.

"In many cases adjustment of a child's diet makes the difference between an idiot and a productive member of society," said Ambrose. "But, to alter his diet, you've got to know that he has the problem and that it can, in some cases, respond to a certain diet."

Similar in some respects to that used to diagnose metabolic disorders in adults, the equipment chemically analyzes a tiny speck of blood and records its findings on a graph.

Existing methods of detecting abnormally high blood levels of phenylalanine and tyrosine, two amino acids whose imbalance can cause severe retardation, take 24 hours and tests must be separately run.

The equipment developed by Ambrose for detecting high levels of the acids does the job simultaneously, takes an hour and requires but one blood sample, said the chemist.

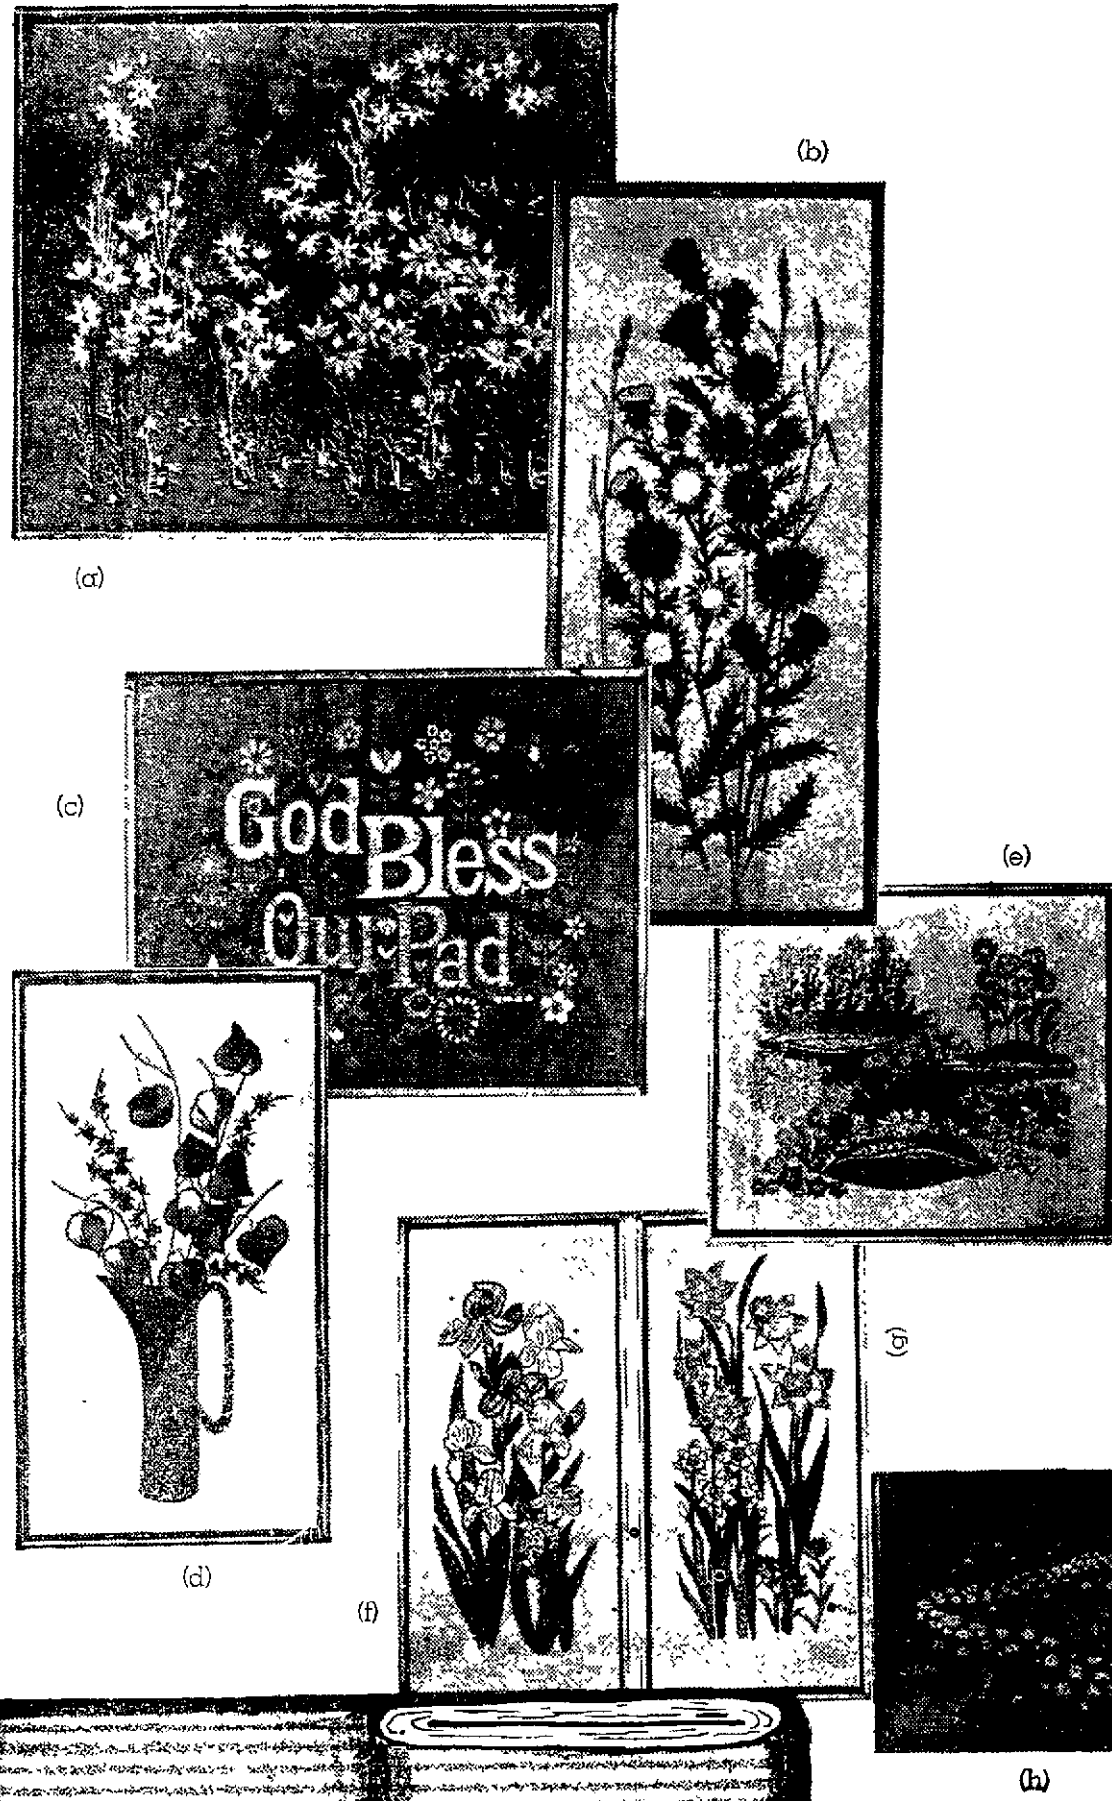

Ambrose, who will report on his work next month at the International Conference of Genetics in Paris, says he is able to run 80 samples an hour.

Ambrose says his equipment also will be useful in premarital genetic counseling.

He says his equipment makes a blood test for genetic reasons as practical as the simple venereal disease test already required by law before marriage.

Demos Plan Race Without Candidate

(c) New York Times
Washington — For the first time in its history, the Democratic party has laid down a comprehensive political plan covering the year before its 1972 presidential candidate is chosen, aimed at improving his chances in the following critical four months.

The party's national chairman, Lawrence F. O'Brien, made public Saturday the outlines of the program, warning that President Nixon could probably not be defeated with a "crash" effort only organized after the Miami Beach convention next July.

Among the chairman's major goals for the upcoming year were these:

—Organizing a series of fund-raising drives to lay the foundations for the 1972 campaign, including direct mail appeals to small contributors.

—Maintaining active cooperation between the contenders for the Democratic nomination throughout the primaries, including the possibility of televised debates using public service time and jointly financed pollings conducted by the national committee.

—Conducting research to identify and develop issues that can be effective against the Republican ticket and do not involve either the war in Vietnam or the economy.

—Preparing in advance of the convention, in consultation with the potential candidates, as many elements of the campaign as possible, covering strategy, themes, communications and an action plan for the nominee during the summer lull after the relatively early convention.

—Working for compliance by all state party organizations with the convention and delegate selection reforms drafted by two commissions set up after the unruly and divisive Chicago convention of 1968.

"Eighteen months ago the election of a Democratic president in 1972 was impossible. Today it is a possibility. Whether or not this possibility is transformed into probability depends in large measure upon what the Democratic party does in the next 12 months," O'Brien said.

Telephone Workers Ratify New Contract

New York (UPI) — Telephone workers around the country who struck the Bell system a month ago have ratified a new contract three weeks after returning to work everywhere but in New York state, it was announced Saturday.

The union's 23 New York state locals voted to continue their strike against the New York Telephone Co.

The CWA members fill various technical posts in the Bell system, mostly as installers, repairmen or long-distance operators.

CWA Vice President Morton Bahr said 36 bargaining units nationwide ratified the new contract by a vote of 196,877 to 71,458. In New York, he said, the vote was 11,405 to 9,734 against the contract.

Unionized employees of the American Telephone & Telegraph (AT&T) Co.'s long lines department ratified the contract by a nationwide vote of 7,878 to 4,396, but an AT&T spokesman said it is not certain whether long-distance operators will return to work in New York.

"The strike is continuing at New York Telephone, so our people in New York state may be affected by their picket lines," the spokesman said.

Bahr said the CWA will resume New York state negotiations with the New York Telephone Co. in Manhattan Monday. He did not say where the negotiators will meet.

"We cannot understand why our craftsmen would turn down the biggest and best settlement ever negotiated with their union," a telephone company spokesman said. "We are ready to return to bargaining immediately with the CWA International to reach an acceptable agreement."

Former Miss America Still Bowling Enthusiast

An athletic-minded blonde from Illinois who switched from bowling to the trampoline and combined her beauty, intelligence and grace to achieve athletic excellence and the Miss America crown of 1969 has returned to bowling.

"I started bowling at age nine with the kids in the neighborhood. One boy's father owned a bowling center, and we all loved the game so much," says Judi Ford, who at 21 is a junior at the University of Illinois majoring in physical education.

And Judi Ford may be the most striking bowlerette ever to have strolled along the sidewalks near the Champaign-Urbana campus. She certainly is the most beautiful member of President Nixon's Committee on Physical Fitness and Sports — since she is honored as that group's lone female member.

The 5'7", 125-pound native of Belvedere, Ill., a small town near the Wisconsin border, was probably the most athletic young woman ever to wear the Miss America crown.

Besides her school work and occasional personal appearances, Judi is currently the National Bowling Council's "Bowl-A-Shape" Ambassadors. She will be making trips across the country during the next 18 months to talk about bowling as the fun sport for everyone who wants to stay in shape without working hard.

"I bowled regularly until age 16," says the green-eyed former Miss America. "Bowling helped me develop coordination for my trampoline exercises. Now I enjoy bowling whenever I can because it is a good, fun body exercise."

Judi did so well on the trampoline through the years that she performed her exercises before the Miss America panel of judges, something no other Miss America candidate had ever done before.

Perhaps Judi Ford became a bowler because of her mother's influence.

"Mother used to bowl in a league, so it was natural for her children to pick up the game," says Judi. "I have a cousin a month younger than I who often bowled over 200. I think he felt cheated to be younger than I and, as a result, worked hard to beat me at bowling," she muses.

Jensen No Longer Just a Bowler

By RANDY YORK

Max Jensen, who graces the cover of the Sunday Journal and Star's annual bowling edition, says, "I'm not really a bowler anymore."

When you join the PBA (Professional Bowlers Association) you become a performer more than a bowler," Max claims. "You compete before the public and owe them your respect."

That, in part, helps explain why Max chose fashionable, two-tone brown double knit slacks and matching spats made by his wife Jan for the color cover.

WHY ACCEPT LESS THAN THE BEST... ALWAYS CHOOSE KEEPSAKE

"I think I'll be the only pro on the tour with spats," Max says of his double knit instep and ankle coverings. "I thought it would be a good idea to start out in something unique."

Max's competitive debut was equally unique. He made the 24-man finals of the Tucson, Ariz., Open last month and finished 21st for a $575 return.

Max, however, points out that "They say it takes about $600 a week on the tour to make ends meet." In four appearances as a pro he has collected $1,575. After non-cashing performances in tournaments at El Paso and Houston, Tex., he pocketed

Max Jensen Joins Pro Tour

$1,000 late last month for a PBA regional win at Kansas City. I'm shooting for PBA rookie of the year," Max admits. "I know it will take a lot of breaks, but that Kansas City win has got to help."

His financial concerns are obvious, too, especially after Max quit what he calls an excellent Lincoln post office job, which he held for 11 years before deciding to turn pro last spring at age 30.

"I think I had the ability to turn pro five years ago," Max says. "But the kids were just too young. The youngest of our three children is seven now and pretty self-sufficient, so I decided now was the time to make the decision."

"I knew it would take a long time for my wife to accept the situation though," Max adds. "We first thought about it after I finished 23rd in the Lincoln Open last fall, and we kept talking about it all winter. Then we finally made the decision."

Max's Lincoln performance seemingly earned the respect of his PBA comrades. The three members who signed his application for membership have carved a reputable niche in the PBA — Johnny Petraglia, who is almost a cinch to win bowler of the year honors this year after setting an all-time money winnings record already; Nelson Burton Jr., the 1970 PBA bowler of the year; and Skee Foremsky, the smooth Houston southpaw who made the finals of the Lincoln Open last fall.

Individual sponsors, who are financial backers, are quite common among PBA pros in their early competitive years.

"I was sure fortunate to get a sponsor like I have," Max says of Lincolnite Tony Alesio, who owns Tony and Luigi's restaurant. "He agreed to put up $3,500 for nine tournaments."

"I've been pleased so far," Max says. "I hated to have someone sponsor me and then not do well. Basically, there are three lane conditions on the tour — one for a right-handed hook, one for a straight throwing right-hander and of course, one for the left-hander."

"I think I've encountered each condition in my first three tournaments," Max notes. "I did well at Tucson because I throw a hook. I had trouble carrying at El Paso because it wasn't conducive for a hook. And left-handers dominated at Houston."

Max hopes he can do well enough on the fall tour to qualify for invitations to various, selective winter engagements.

"I want to make it my life and I'm confident I can," he says. "I've always had great confidence in my bowling. And I've bowled against the pros enough to know that they're not going to bowl well all the time."

"Bowling is never a safe game," he continues. "You don't know who's going to have the hot hand. Everybody who has a bowling ball and a heartbeat can get hot. I try as hard in practice as I do in competition and hope to capitalize on someone else's mistakes."

"I realize the tour will be very hard," Max adds, "especially because I'm married and have a family. The financial responsibility probably can be frustrating."

Max, however, welcomes the challenge of being Nebraska's only current active member of the PBA.

"I'm anxious to really get into it," he says. "I think I have something to offer."

WIBC Claims Three Million

The 1970-71 bowling season, which ended July 31, reached milestone proportions for the Women's International Bowling Congress.

Mrs. Freda S. Botkin, WIBC executive secretary-treasurer, announced final record membership figures of 3,050,977, the first time in the 54-year history of WIBC that three million members had been processed in one season.

It marked the 25th consecutive season that WIBC had shown a membership increase. Membership was 2.37 per cent over the previous season's total of 2,988,077.

The number of leagues sanctioned by WIBC during the 1970-71 season totaled 123,040, exceeding the previous season's total by 1,738. WIBC members bowled in 2,766 local associations in 52 states and Canadian provincial association.

The high point of the season occurred on April 15 when WIBC processed its three millionth member, 17-year-old Kimberly A. Ihle of Blue Earth, Minn.

Parkway Scorers Liked

Parkway Lanes is currently sporting the latest style in bowling—automatic scorers.

The scorers, made by Brunswick, have been installed on all 24 lanes at Parkway. Installation began last May and, according to alley officials, the response has been for the most part very good.

The scorers are operated by six computers, one for every four lanes. Each bowler activates the computer by identifying himself through his computer code number before bowling. The computer then automatically marks the scores on an overhead screen score sheet.

If an error is made, a manual entry panel allows the bowler to dial the correct score onto the sheet.

Automatic scorers are available for both league and open bowling.

Parkway officials estimate that there are approximately 75-100 such automatic scorers in operation in the United States. They added that the machines are beginning to "really catch on" nationally.

Versatile Sort

Don Glover, a left-hander on the Professional Bowler Assn. tour from Bakersfield, Calif., is proud of one particular accomplishment: "I'm the only pro to have rolled 300 games in three different countries — the United States, Japan and Canada."

In 1962 the first cross-country tour was assembled and one year later PBA bowlers visited 38 cities, including stops in Montreal, Canada and San Juan, Puerto Rico, with prize money climbing to nearly $800,000. Since 1962 PBA officials have concentrated on a flexible 33 to 35 city tour.

Along with the phenomenal

Format Is Popular

A new PBA format, instituted in the 1971 summer tour, is a hit with fans and bowlers.

An increased number of finalists with more match-game play and reduction from 50 to 30 in bonus pins awarded the winner of a match game are the chief ingredients.

The entire field bows 12 qualifying games the second day (practice and Pro-Am competition are slated for the first day) and six more qualifying games the third day.

The field then is cut to 24 players and match game finals play begins with eight games. The final 16 games, in two eight-game blocks, are contested the fourth day of the tournament.

Each finalist carries his total pinfall and also receives 30 bonus pins for an individual victory (15 for a tie).

Owner and operator of Bowl-Mor Lanes is George Johnson.

By HAL BROWN

The third annual Lincoln PBA Open Bowling Tournament, with new dates for the third year in a row, will offer members of the Professional Bowlers Association tour an additional $5,000 in prize money this fall.

The third annual event is set for Oct. 22-25 at Lincoln's Hollywood Bowl with a $37,500 prize fund, thanks to a boost both by Lincoln sponsors and by the PBA itself.

The board of directors of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, which has underwritten the tournament through its Sports and Recreation Committee and in conjunction with the Lincoln Bowling Proprietors Association, has okayed an increase in the Lincoln share from $10,800 to $12,000. The PBA is making up the remainder of the increase.

The tourney dates were moved up this year to avoid conflicts with that sports king in Nebraska—Cornhusker football. The Big Red are Oklahoma State that weekend.

A pro-am, the major money raiser for the tourney, is set for the first day, Oct. 22, with the pros taking over for the next three days with the finals again scheduled for Monday night.

This move was made by the PBA a year ago to avoid a major conflict for space in the nation's sports pages with pro football on Sundays.

The major problem facing the sponsoring Lincoln groups now is coming up with the additional revenue promised to the prize fund.

"We can't get it from the pro-am," notes co-chairman Jim Dill. "Because we had 300 in the pro-am last year and that's the maximum we can handle."

"The thing we've got to do now with the pro-am is work hard to keep the number at 300 because we can't afford to drop below that maximum with our increased financial responsibility."

Greg Kallos

Areas where Dill hopes to pick up the additional $1,200 is in ticket sales, patron sponsorships and program advertising.

"Some of our people think we can pick up the whole bundle in patron sponsors," he offers.

"But I think we can do a better job of promoting gate sales and program advertising."

Jim Dill
Co-Chairman

Lincoln bowler Max Jensen as a regular on the PBA tour.

"Having Max in the lineup on a regular basis should help us in bringing more Lincoln people to the lanes," says Dill.

One area where the earlier dates (three weeks earlier than last year) could have an effect would be in the pro-am since a large number of pro-am entries have come in the past two years in early November.

But Dill doesn't see this as a particular problem.

"The dates are far enough into the bowling season that interest and enthusiasm should be high," he says. "What it means is that we're going to have to push harder early in the season."

As Dill and co-chairman Greg Kallos, along with Sports and Recreation Committee chairman John O'Neill and others involved in the tournament's promotion head toward their third tourney, they've still got one hope in the back of their minds.

"We're still hoping that some day, we can come up with a sponsor to add money to the prize fund so we can join some of the bigger tournaments on the tour," Dill concludes.

Champ Pro-Am Enjoys Success

The Championship Pro-Am was held for the first time this year and had 32 champions in the field. About 12 winners will take part in the 1972 event and will compete for a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Winston-Salem sponsors the event as part of the Winston-Salem Classic.

Getting Started in Bowling Easy Regardless of Ability

Have you ever watched bowling on television and thought it looked fun . . . or easy?

Could you picture yourself as the participant knocking down an infinite number of pins with a powerful release . . . or a sweeping hook?

Even if you can't overpower the game, at least you can enjoy it "whether you've ever played before or not," according to men's city bowling secretary Bernie Kossek.

It's easy to get started in bowling, Kossek says, pointing out that individual contacts or previous experience are not necessary.

"Now is the time for anyone interested to get into the game," Kossek says. "We're having meetings this week and next to organize our winter leagues, which start the last week of this month.

"Every house (bowling establishment) has at least one or two leagues for beginners or the low average bowler," he adds. "Bowlers should just contact the place where they would like to bowl and we'll put you in touch with appropriate sponsors."

Kossek emphasizes that bowling is one of the few sports which does not require an initial financial outlay for equipment.

All of Lincoln's bowling establishments offer free use of balls and shoe rental service at nominal cost. Lane fees constitute the most expensive part of bowling, ranging from 45 to 55 cents per game.

Individual lessons can be secured at almost all Lincoln establishments.

Kossek urges Lincolinites to take advantage of the low-cost opportunity and join America's No. 1 participation sport.

Legion of Women Bowlers Growing; Gals Now Outnumber Male Keglers

By RANDY YORK

For the first time in at least a decade there are more sanctioned women bowlers registered in the Capital City than there are sanctioned men bowlers.

"I was talking to Maxine Meyer the other day and, of course, she was crowing," veteran men's city bowling secretary Bernie Kossek relates.

Maxine, the women's city bowling secretary, had good reason to "crow." Of the more than 10,000 sanctioned bowlers in Lincoln, her organization claimed the biggest share.

The women registered an all-time high of 5,256 in winter leagues, an official increase of more than 3,000 bowlers in 12 years. The men's total dipped to 4,951, down 64 from last year's total.

Kossek indicated his organization lost a couple of men's leagues from the previous year and two late afternoon leagues at Emerald's El Rancho Lanes, involving students from Milford Tech, also were dropped.

"That alone made the difference," Kossek notes. "Of course, what we didn't fill up, the women immediately took. They're an aggressive group and their enthusiasm seems to grow every year."

Kossek, who has served as men's city secretary for 22 years, says this year was the first time his group had been outnumbered by women since he has kept individual membership records.

He believes the rapid growth of women league bowling is a national trend which can be traced chiefly to automatic pinsetters and more morning and afternoon leagues at "better day time prices."

Maxine, who claims bowling "is becoming a ladies' sport," says increased female interest gets its strength from better junior bowling programs.

Both Bernie and Maxine note that mixed bowling leagues are enjoying tremendous popularity in the Capital City. "There's a bigger demand for mixed leagues every year," Bernie says.

"And they're one of the first leagues to fill," Maxine adds, pointing out there are more than 50 such mixed leagues in Lincoln.

Local bowlers have modern facilities from which to choose. The six establishments which carry heavy league schedules are Hollywood Parkway and Plaza (24 lanes), Bowl-Mor (16), Northeast and Tony's Ranch Bowl (12).

Although the University of Nebraska Student Union also hosts various leagues, it is primarily used for open bowling. The Snooker Bowl uses its six lane facility exclusively for open bowling.

Even if you're not part of more than 200 Lincoln leagues which pursue America's No. 1 participation sport, there are plenty of open hours at your favorite alley.

State Bowling Proprietors Returning Officers to Posts

By BOB MOYER

The state bowling proprietors have reelected new officers for terms beginning in Jan., 1972.

Reelected were Vic Bianchini of Sioux City, president; Red Smith of Parkway Lanes in Lincoln, vice-president and Virgil Miller of Nebraska City, secretary-treasurer.

The BPAA is a national organization that began in 1932 in Detroit when 13 proprietors banded together.

The organization's main aim is to promote bowling in the state through a series of tournaments.

The organization is divided into four districts — Southeast, North East, Central and Panhandle. Omaha previously comprised a district, but this was incorporated into the Southeast district, which is the largest.

The men will compete at Crown Lanes in Scottsbluff.

In addition, the State PBAA sponsors three youth tournaments. They include:

The Family Two-some tournament March 18 at the Shamrock Lanes in O'Neill.

The All-American Youth tournament for graduating high school students April 20 at the Western Bowl in Millard.

The Non-graduating high school youth tournament May 6 at Sky Lanes in Omaha.

The mixed team handicap tournament on the weekends of Feb. 5-6 and 12-13 at the Columbus Bowl.

The Clump of Champions for the top teams in bowling leagues around the state. This tournament is split into two divisions, Eastern and Western. Both divisions will roll on June 3-4 and 10-11 with the Eastern division ladies bowling at Boulevard Bowl in Columbus and the Eastern men at the Park Bowl in Fremont while the Western division women will compete at Cedar Bowl in North Platte and

Petraglia Nears $100,000 Mark

Never in its 12-year history has the PBA boasted a $100,000-a-year money winner.

A slim lefthander from Brooklyn, Johnny Petraglia, may become the first.

By mid-summer, with a lucrative fall tour and several summer tournaments remaining, Petraglia's earnings were approaching $75,000.

Petraglia ended the PBA's winter tour with four championships and was only $222 short of the all-time mark of $87,375 won by Jim Stefanchik, Joliet, Ill., in all of 1968. He broke the record during the ABC Masters in April.

Petraglia Tops Pinfall

Johnny Petraglia of Brooklyn, N.Y., has been the top bowler on the pro tour pinfall-wise in 1971.

Including tournaments midway through July, Petraglia had a 213.752 average for 19 meets while runnerup Don Johnson, who won the Lincoln Open in 1969, has a 212.866 average.

Lincoln Open Tourney Attracts 'Name' Bowlers

The Lincoln Open is neither the biggest nor oldest tournament on the Professional Bowlers Association (PBA) fall tour, but it attracts the "name" bowlers.

That's one of the secrets of the PBA tour. PBA officials guarantee that an overwhelming percentage of the top money winners will compete at all stops, big and small, on the tour. The two bowlers who have won Lincoln Open titles are by no means "unknowns."

Don Johnson, winner of the inaugural Lincoln Open in 1969, used that win as a springboard to success on the winter tour and won the lucrative 1970 Tournament of Champions.

Defending Lincoln Open champ Dave Soutar has also enjoyed a big season after winning the Lincoln title.

Through mid-August Johnson and Soutar ranked Nos. 2 and No. 4, respectively, on the 1971 earnings list. Johnson had compiled official earnings of over $53,000 and Soutar's income topped the $33,000 mark.

Current tour leader Johnny Petraglia bowled in both Lincoln tournaments and led the event through the semifinal round in 1970 before fading to fifth in the match play finals.

Dave Soutar . . . Lincoln Open Champ

The competitive nature of the pro tour is evidenced in the fact that only two bowlers, Paul Colwell and Teata Semiz, have reached the finals in both Lincoln tournaments.

Colwell won $950 for an eighth place finish in 1969 and $650 by finishing 14th last year. Semiz was 13th and won $700 in 1969 and climbed to ninth for a $900 payoff in 1970.

But the big winners have been Johnson and Soutar, who took home $3,000 checks for their winning efforts.

They'll be back looking for the big pay day again.

Kegler Jargon Plentiful

Bowling, like any sport, has a wide and colorful range of jargon used by all alley denizens.

Some of the most common expressions include:

Backup — A ball which fades away from the pocket.

Chop — Chopping off the front pin by driving it straight back past any other standing pins to the right or left, an error, blow.

Count — Number of pins knocked down on first ball used in computing a spare score in previous frame.

Curve — A ball which moves to the left from the moment it is delivered. Not a hook which waits until it nears the pins before breaking to the left (Opposite for left handers).

Dutch 200 — A game of exactly 200 made by alternate strikes and spares.

Fast — In some areas a lane which allows the ball to take a wide hook in others a lane which holds down the hook. Today these lanes are more accurately referred to as "holding" or "running."

Foul — Touching or going behind the foul line as you deliver the ball.

Foul Line — Line marking the end of the approach and beginning of the lane.

Frame — The tenth part of a game. The squares on the scoresheet each indicate one frame.

Gutter Ball — A ball which goes into the gutter (channel) before reaching the pins; also channel ball.

Headpin — No. 1 pin.

Holding Lane — A lane which resists hooking action.

Hook — A ball that breaks sharply toward the pocket.

Lift — Giving the ball an upward motion with the fingers at point of release.

Lifting — Throwing the ball in the air beyond the line.

Maples — Synonym for pins.

Mark — A strike or spare.

Pitch — The angle at which the hole is bored in a ball.

Runway — The area where the bowler stands and delivers his ball; more common term today is approach.

Sleeper — A pin hidden behind another, in some areas called a railroad.

Spare — Knocking all pins down with two deliveries.

Split — Combinations of pins left standing on first delivery that have space between them.

Spot — The place on the lane where the bowler aims.

Strike — Knocking down all pins on first ball.

Turkey — Three strikes in a row.

Bowling Secretary Essential To Smoothly Running League

By BOB MOYER

The single most important figure in the running of a smooth league is the secretary.

Typical of the good league secretary is George Kargo, who runs the McCoy League at Plaza and has also been the secretary of several summer leagues.

George started bowling about ten years ago because "I thought it looked like fun, so I thought I'd try it." He's been bowling ever since.

He decided to get into secretary work because he found "I can get to know the people better and it's just a lot of fun."

"I know some leagues do have troubles," George says, "But the leagues I've run have gone smoothly so far. Most of the bowlers are very knowledgeable about the rules and usually go along with them."

"I think it's mostly a matter of communicating with the team captains so that they know what's going on," George adds.

For the most part, the secretary's duties are routine work. The biggest problem, according to George, is lining up teams, making sure that the league has enough bowlers.

Other duties include getting the bowlers sanctioned, depositing the league's money in the bank, figuring and posting averages and divvying up the loot at the end of season.

Each year the leagues elect their own officers—president, vice-president and secretary. However, according to George, most offices are carried over from the previous year.

Summer leagues present a different problem.

The obvious difference is the amount of time of the league, usually 9-12 weeks, as opposed to a run of 35 weeks in a winter league, but also the quality of bowlers is not as high as vacations often cause a lot of substitutions.

"The basic problem, though, is still communication, especially between the team captains and the league secretary," George says. "I've had very little trouble with any of the leagues I've worked with."

Secretaries also get paid. It is usually a sum decided upon by the league and invariably is not commensurate to the work involved.

This doesn't bother George, though, because for him, like most bowlers, the fun is in getting to know the people you bowl with.

New Grouping by Grades Set For Trial by Junior Bowlers

By STEVE GILLISPIE

The Junior Bowling program will have a new setup on a trial basis for the next year according to state director Lil Albert of Parkway Lanes.

"The kids have been regrouped into grades instead of age groups," Mrs. Albert explained. "We feel this will divide up the program more evenly."

"We're going to try it for a year and then see if we should adopt it for good."

The new grouping will have four divisions — sub-prep, prep, juniors and majors.

The sub-prep will include kindergarten through third grade; prep, fourth through sixth; juniors, seventh through ninth and majors, sophomores through seniors.

However Plaza's youth director, Yvonne Pettit, suggests most youngsters be seven before entering a junior bowling program. "In most cases, a child can't hold, swing and roll an eight-pound ball until they're about seven," Mrs. Pettit said.

"I wouldn't encourage any parent to let his child start bowling until they can handle the eight-pounder, which is the lightest ball available. Unless a child can handle the eight-pounder easily, it can be very frustrating and discouraging to the child.

"If a child of five or six can handle the eight-pounder, we are more than glad to enroll them in the program," pointed out Yvonne, who has headed Plaza's youth program for 10 years.

Yvonne, Lil, along with District No. 2 coordinator Phil Addleman, Lincoln, District No. 5 coordinator Dick Severyn, North Platte and District No. 1 boss Susie Johnson, Omaha, all serve without pay.

Many are employed at local bowling alleys but put in extra hours helping young bowlers. All agree they work with the program because they enjoy bowling and working with youth.

Any youth can register in a junior bowling program at most bowling alleys by paying a nominal registration fee.

After that the youth will be assigned to a team and can bowl for a small cost. Free lessons and free special lessons also are available.

Three tournaments are held during the winter season plus the state meet.

The three are singles, doubles and family twosomes and trophies are awarded not only for the tourneys but also for the regular session for team finish, high game, high series and most improved bowler.

The sub-prep and prep leagues aren't allowed to travel for the state tournament so scores must be mailed in and winners are determined on a score comparison.

The juniors and majors travel to state tournaments and according to youth officials this is probably the season's highlight for most junior and major bowlers.

There are summer leagues and some alleys have special leagues during that time. Plaza has child-parent, Campfire Girls and moonlight leagues during the summer for youths.

There are approximately 1,000 junior bowlers in Lincoln according to Mrs. Albert but Lil's pride glows with the state figures. "We've had a tremendous growth and will go over the 3,000 mark this fall," she said.

"One reason the program keeps growing is once kids join, they find it so much fun we have very few drop out."

Lincoln To Host Elks Tourney

Lincoln will host another championship bowling event next year besides the men's state tournament.

The Capital City and Hollywood Bowl will host the Men's State Elks Tournament next April, marking the first time since World War II years that the event will be held in Lincoln.

European Pin Styles Differ

The sport of bowling — like the hotel and resort industry — has an American and a European plan.

In European style bowling, a competitor rolls all ten frames of a game on one lane. In sanctioned American competition, a bowler alternates from frame-to-frame on a pair of adjoining lanes.

Bowling Saluted By Stamp

Design for a commemorative stamped envelope to salute bowling was unveiled at the Bowling Proprietors Assn. of America convention in Freeport, Grand Bahama Islands.

The design, by George Giusti, shows a bowling ball and pin embossed in white on a crimson background.

The envelope will be available in both No. 6 3/4 and No. 10 sizes and can be ordered through post offices with printed return addresses. This is the first time since 1932 that a commemorative stamped envelope will be issued in both large and small sizes. The 1932 issue was the Washington Bicentennial commemorative envelopes.

First-day ceremonies will be in Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 21, opening day of the Seventh World Tournament of the International Bowling Federation. Collectors may order first day cancellations from the Postmaster, Milwaukee, Wis. 53202 at 10 cents per envelope. Size should be specified.

By  Hal Brown

A year ago when Nebraska opened its fall football camp, Husker coaches had a unique problem — deciding which of two quarterbacks would be the starter.

This week as Big Eight teams gather to begin preparations for another campaign, several coaches are close to having that pleasant problem that faced Devaney and Aides a year ago.

But to stay in front of the pack, the Huskers now have not two, but three, to choose from. As Big Eight training camps open, there's a two-quarterback prospect at four of 'em in addition to the trio at NU.

Better Than None

One of those facing the which one to start question is Iowa State's Johnny Majors, who philosophizes, "Having two is better than having none."

Kansas State coach Vince Gibson would like to have such a problem with an inexperienced Dennis Morrison all alone at the Wildcat helm. Jack Mildren has the starting job locked up at Oklahoma and Eddie Crowder at Colorado would like to just find someone to get the ball from the center to start the plays.

"Carlson and Amundson are two of the finest quarterbacks around," Majors believes. "But I'm not as smart as Devaney. Whichever one he chose seemed to be the right one."

Majors seems to be highest on Carlson, exclaiming, "He could be great — even as good as Plunkett (Stanford's Heisman Trophy winner). "When he came to us from junior college, he weighed 225 pounds and was like a cow on ice — he was fat.

"But he got in shape and he has a lot of ability. He's tough and he goes into the huddle with authority."

Gass May Alternate

Floyd Gass at Oklahoma State admits that his 1970 starter, Tony Pounds, is being pressed by sophomore Blackman and he admits, "There's a strong possibility we might use two quarterbacks.

"That would give us two entirely different attacks and make it tougher for teams to defense us. Blackman is a scrambling type while Pounds is a strong passer, but he's limited in what he can do by his size."

The two quarterback problem at Missouri is compounded by the fact that both Roper and Farmer had surgery, Roper on a shoulder and Farmer a knee.

At Nebraska where Devaney a year ago had to choose between Brownson and Tagge each week, he now has a third cog in the picture — Humm.

And the coach of the defending national champions claims he has no qualms about starting a sophomore — "if he's better than the other two.

"Humm will be given a real shot at the job. He doesn't want to be red-shirted if he can beat out the other two. And if he's the best, he'll be the one playing."

But Devaney emphasizes he will definitely have to be the best. "If it comes down to a flip of the coin, he won't win the toss," the coach says.

"And we won't alternate three quarterbacks." And he admits, "There's a possibility we would red shirt one of the two veterans if Humm proves to be the best."

Almost as highly touted as a prep prospect as was Humm is Kansas' David Jaymes, who hopes to battle incumbent Dan Heck for Jayhawk signal-calling honors, but new coach Don Fambrough figures Jaymes has some ground to make up. "Because of his injury last spring we got to see him only three days," Fambrough points out.

The decisions will come in less than a month.

Top Tennis Seeds Advance

Indianapolis, Ind. (AP) — The No. 1 and 2 seeds in both men's and women's singles advanced to the finals by winning injury-riddled semifinal matches Saturday in the $58,000 National Clay Court Open tennis championships.

Top-seeded Cliff Richey, Sarasota, Fla., pounded Jaime Fillof of Chile in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, to earn a shot at his third straight Clay Court Open title. Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia, the 1969 champion here, moved past Clark Graebner of New York City, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

In women's singles, defending champion Linda Tuero, New Orleans, and top-seeded Billy King, Long Beach, Calif., moved into Saturday's finals.

Mrs. King, top ranked American woman, breezed past fourth-seeded Helen Gourlay, Australia, 6-0, 6-2, winning the first 10 games.

Miss Tuero, a 20-year-old Tulane University coed, downed 1969 champion and 1970 runnerup Gail Cantreau of France, 5-7, 6-3, 4-3. Mrs. Chanfreau collapsed on the court with a severe cramp in her left thigh in the third set and was unable to continue.

Phillies Remain Faithful to Lucchesi

In William Penn's "Greene Countrie Towne," all was harmony and sweet accord.

"We feel Frank has done an outstanding job," Bob Carpenter said. "When we give him the horses, he will develop them into a contending club."

"I don't need security, a three or four year contract," Frank Lucchesi said. "I didn't panic. I wasn't worried."

And so, with approximately two months remaining on his two-year contract, the Phillies raised their manager's pay and rehired him for next season. It was a great day for the Irish of south Philly, Fishtown and Frankford, with whom Lou Casey is a warm favorite.

It was also one of those clear and sparkling days, exceedingly rare in baseball, when club executives can look beyond the team standings and find merit in what they see. In the first year of Lucchesi's stewardship, the Phillies ran next to last in the National League East, beating Montreal by half a game. In Frank's second season they are still next to last, yet Bob Carpenter, the owner, and John Quinn, his general manager, aren't letting this guy get away.

Views of Sport

Frank Lucchesi is one of baseball's greatest gentlemen, warm, unassuming, and dead honest. He also has the guts to stay with a player through disappointment and discouragement at whatever risk of criticism.

There seems to be no limit to his patience this side of Harry H. Wendelsteadt, Jr. Only in the presence of Wendelsteadt or one of his accomplices on Chub Feeney's staff of umpires do clouds darken Frank's sunny disposition.

Indeed, he is the only manager in the majors whose brushes with the Brotherhood in Blue are celebrated in his biographical sketch in the team's press brochure. Several of his minor league adventures are reported there with relish, like the story about his attempt to manage his team from a light tower just outside the fence after an umpire ordered him off the premises. This was in the first half of a doubleheader; he contrived to get flung out of the second game just bringing his lineup card to the plate.

On another occasion when the league president ruled him off the grounds for three days, he parked a truck outside the right field fence and directed his team by walkie-talkie.

It is his patience, especially with young players, that makes Lucchesi something special. He put in 12 years in the minors as a player and 19 as a manager before the Phils brought him up.

Carpenter acknowledges the club's responsibility of providing the manager with big league talent. Perhaps Lucchesi will have the horses in time for the Phillies' next pennant year. Starting with their first championship in 1915, they have won once every 35 years. Frank's got till 1985.

Colts Win, But Fans Stay Away

Compiled from News Wires
The world champion Baltimore Colts made it two wins in three exhibition starts Saturday night, but were big losers at the box office again.

Only 12,013, about 5,000 less than last week when Colts' president Steve Rosenbloom criticized local fan support, saw the Colts defeat the Chicago Bears, 21-13.

The Colts choked off several Chicago threats while nursing a one-point lead, then pulled away on a 37-yard scoring pass from Earl Morrall to Ray Perkins with 2:22 to play.

George Jakowenko and Jim Bakken made up for an erratic offense with three field goals in leading the St. Louis Cardinals past the Houston Oilers, 16-14.

Jakowenko booted a 38-yard field goal to send St. Louis ahead 10-7 five second before the half and Bakken kicked field goals of 15 and 25 yards for a 16-7 lead in the third quarter.

Former Cardinal Charley Johnson, quarterbacking the Oilers the first half, connected on 10 of 15 passes and directed Houston on an 11-play drive covering 80 yards for a touchdown.

Lynn Dickey took over for the Oilers the final two quarters and was successful on only 7 of 22 passes for 42 yards.

Jan Stenerud kicked four field goals, his last a 50-yarder that pulled Kansas City from behind, as the Chiefs edged the Atlanta Falcons 12-10.

Stenerud's winning 3-pointer came after reserves had moved the ball from the Chiefs' 23 to midfield. Moments before Stenerud's clincher, Bill Bell kicked a 38-yard field goal that put the Falcons ahead 10-9.

Terry Bradshaw capped a 98-yard fourth-period drive with a 33-yard touchdown pass to Dave Smith to rally the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 16-13 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

The Steelers took over on their own two-yard line after the Packers' Dame Hampton was stopped for no gain on a fourth-and-one play.

Jess Phillips scored a pair of touchdowns on one-yard plunges in the second quarter and rookie quarterback Ken Anderson tied two second-half scoring passes to spark the Cincinnati Bengals to a 31-24 victory over the Detroit Lions.

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach threw touchdown bombs of 69, 81 and 10 yards against the New Orleans Saints and soccer style kicker Rom Fritsch of Austria boomed field goals of 45 and 50 yards to give Dallas a 36-21 victory.

A sellout crowd of 72,000 roared in the Cotton Bowl as Staubach, who is in a fight for the starting quarterback job with Craig Morton, tied a 69-yard scoring shot to Bullet Bob Hayes with the game only five minutes old.

Washington went on top late in the first period on Curt Knight's extra-point kick, then held off two Denver scoring threats to take a 17-13 victory.

Off the field, New York Giants second string quarterback Dick Shiner quit the team on the eve of the club's Sunday game with the New England Patriots. Shiner had been scheduled to start.

Fishing for bluegills in an out-of-the-way pond in the hay country around Atkinson proves big success.

Hay Country Boasts Bluegills, Too

By BOB MUNGER
Atkinson — This is hay country.
As far as the eye can see there are stacks and bales of prairie hay, green bumps on the almost unbroken stretches of flat land, stark and appealing in its lonesomeness.
“I know where there’s a bluegill pond a little north of here,” Ted Manzer of Atkinson said, “where you can catch all the dinner-plate-sized scrapers you want. It’s a little difficult to get in to, however, and you might have a bit of trouble with that big bus.”
He was referring to the 27-foot long Winnebago motor home that has sheltered the traveling Munger family for the past week or so.
When his listeners scoffed at the idea of a bluegill pond in hay country, he insisted that the spot was a real dandy.
“Along in the evening when the sun goes down it’ll provide some good bass and crappie fishing, too,” he swore in silencing the “Doubting Thomases” that questioned his judgment. “It isn’t a very big pond, but it’s so far back in the boonies that you aren’t going to have much competition fishing it.”
Our tour group had grown. In addition to my wife and I and our three small boys, we had her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brunkhorst of O’Neill and their four youngsters; and my wife’s father, George L. Miller of Columbus. It made for a jolly group. We were weekending at the Brunkhorsts, and we all decided to go for a bluegill fishing trip.

Ted said there was no way to give directions to the pond, so he led us in his sedan some 27 or 28 miles north of here, then off another mile or so before we turned in at a farmstead. After getting permission from a surprised farmer who kept shading his head as the whale on wheels drove through his farm lot, we headed back into the hills another mile or so, easing our way over some fairly hairy sand trails that were designed for a jeep or a pickup before we finally arrived at our destination.
The little lake was shaped in a “U” form, with twin arms that backed up into the hills, blue and clear but wind whipped in what sister-in-law described as “a normal Holt County Zephyr.”

“If they can call Chicago the ‘Windy City’ they sure could call this the ‘Windy County,’” she quipped, with a good deal of justification as we watched the ripples marching in good order on the surface of the lake.
The kids fell to fishing with a vengeance, baiting with earthworms that Ted had dug before we left Atkinson, and almost before the worms had hit the water bluegills were hitting them. About one in five or six was a “keeper,” the plate-sized ones that Ted had promised were there, but with all the action no one really seemed to mind.
In two or three hours of fishing we had 30 or so of the big ones on the stringer, and it was time to clean them for supper. This chore out of the way, it was then time to sit in lawn chairs on the shady side of the motor home and swap lies as we waited for the gals to get our fish dinner on the table.

It was nothing short of a tremendous. Bluegills fried to a golden brown, garnished with onion slices and accompanied by a mound of mashed potatoes, followed by a slice of chilled watermelon . . . man, there’s no way to beat that. Particularly when served on the banks of the lake in which the fish were caught.
“If you just had more time,” Manzer said, “I’d take you up into South Dakota on the Indian reservation. I know a spot there where we could catch brown trout as long as your arm, and plenty of them.”
And you know, after the way his promises had paid off on the bluegill pond, not a soul doubted him.

Waterfowl Regulations Liberal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anticipating excellent fall flights, the Interior department announced Saturday waterfowl regulation frameworks within which states select their 1971-72 hunting seasons.
The frameworks are about the same as last season and most species of ducks are expected to be moving down flyways as abundantly as in 1970, a good year for waterfowl hunters, Interior said.
The regulations are based on predictions by Fish and Wildlife Service biologists who in recent months have been making aerial surveys of nesting grounds in the north.
Optimism comes from habitat conditions of the prairie potholes of Canada and the northern United States where many of the favored game ducks breed.

These conditions have been described as excellent the past three years, following several years of drought.
The framework regulations were established after recommendations were made by state wildlife agencies, flyway councils and private conservation and wildlife organizations.
They are designed to maintain high breeding population levels of waterfowl while providing good hunting.
Specific hunting regulations within the Interior frameworks will be announced by state fish and game agencies.
Although the waterfowl situation is generally good, Interior said, there will be some special restrictions in certain flyways on species including canvasbacks, redheads, wood ducks and black ducks.

Some goose flocks still need special protection by regulation although goose populations are generally in good condition, it was reported.
Dates within which states may select open seasons, the length of the open seasons, bag limits and other special provisions include:
Mississippi Flyway
States may select, between Oct. 1 and Jan. 16, concurrent open seasons on ducks and geese of (a) 50 days with basic bag limits on ducks of 4 daily and 8 in possession; or (b) 50 days with basic bag limits on ducks of 6 daily and 12 in possession; and a bag limit on coots of 15 daily and 30 in possession.

The daily bag on ducks may not include more than 2 wood ducks and one canvasback or one redhead, and possession limits are 4 wood ducks and one canvasback or one redhead.
Mallard limits are 2 in the bag and 4 in possession. The limit on mergansers is 5 daily and 10 in possession, of which not more than one in the bag and 2 in possession may be hooded mergansers.
Between Oct. 1 and Jan. 23 Mississippi flyway states, except Louisiana, may select an open season of 70 days on geese, with a daily bag and possession limit of 5.
Louisiana may select, between Oct. 1 and Feb. 14, an open season of 70 days on blue, snow and white-fronted geese, with a daily bag and possession limit of 5 geese.
Some other states will have bag restrictions on Canada and white-fronted geese and special season provisions.
Central Flyway
States may fix, between Oct. 1 and Jan. 16, concurrent open seasons on ducks and geese of (a) 70 days with basic bag limits on ducks of 5 daily and 10 in possession, or (b) 55 days with basic bag limits on ducks of 6 daily and 12 in possession; and a bag limit on coots of 15 daily and 30 in possession.
Daily bag limits on ducks may not include more than 2 wood ducks and one canvasback or one redhead. The possession limit may not include more than 4 wood ducks and one canvasback or one redhead.
The bag limit on mergansers is 5 daily and 10 in possession, of which not more than one daily and 2 in possession may be hooded mergansers.
If a special point system season is selected by the states, 90-day seasons may be set in the High Plains Mallard Management Unit portions of Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, South Dakota and Wyoming.
Flyway seasons on geese may be selected between Oct. 1 and Jan. 16 with a daily bag and possession limit of 5. Limits are lower in some states.

Hunting Seasons Limited

Already outdoorsmen are getting excited about hunting, sharpening their eyes on a trap range or a favorite target area. It should be remembered, though, that seasons on game animals are limited, and hunters must wait for those seasons.

Violators of game season regulations and other rules of Nebraska's outdoors, reported recently by Game and Parks Commission conservation officers, include:

- Taking Game Birds in Closed Season: Leon A. Wheeler, Atkinson, $100 fine, three turkeys confiscated, and costs.
- Fishing Without a Permit: Gregory A. Westergren, Jr., Dennis A. Patterson, Charles D. Keager, $100 fine, three bass released, and costs.
- Richardson, Cheryl E. Richardson, Rose A. Mach, Jeanne M. Lee, and Preston L. White, 19, all of Lincoln, $100 fine, one bass released, and costs.
- Joyner, Arthur, Chaney, 16, Patricia Brockman, and Laurel J. Svendsen, all of Omaha, $100 fine, one bass released, and costs.
- Rastad, 17, George V. Thompson, and LaDonna R. Horst, 13, all of North Platte, $100 fine, one bass released, and costs.
- Englund, Blanche L., Knapkowski, Kary, Valora I. Krouse, Panama, Thomas V. Cech, 18, Clarkson, L. A. Anderson, Hyatt, James, Arledge, 17, Arvada, Colo., Charles Burshorst, 17, Downers Grove, Ill., Edward J. Matthews, Pischelway, N. J., and Joan Brown, 16, Wheatridge, Colo., each $10 and costs.
- No Fishing Permit (season counts): Preston L. White, Lincoln, $25 and costs.
- Fishing With Too Many Lines: Edmund Luczynski, Omaha, and Edwin E. Crocker, Ulica, each $10 and costs.
- Insufficient Number of Life Jackets: Eugene E. Cobb, Joseph, Mo.; James R. Shoemaker, Cambridge; Glen W. Lytle, McCook, and Marvin L. Murry, Omaha, each $10 and costs; Elmer L. Weaver, Jr., Omaha, $9 and costs.
- No Life Jackets: Donald H. Morgan, McCook; Lowell R. Gates; Sharon A. Westcott; June A. Edinger; Thomas W. Decker, and Steven L. Warner, all of Omaha, and Gary L. Baird, Grand Island, each $10 and costs.
- Improperly Equipped Vessel: Charles J. Slater, Omaha, $20 and costs.
- No 1971 Boat Registration: Robert R. Briggs, Beatrice, $10 and costs.
- No Life Jackets on Child Under 12: Robert D. Krein, Lincoln, $10 and costs.
- Towing Skier Without Mirror or Observer: Norman L. Johnston, Lincoln, $20 and costs.
- Operating Motorboat Without Lights: Jerrold P. Buk, and Dennis D. Haas, both of Lincoln; Gregory Solen, and David Hardeman, both of Omaha, each $10 and costs.
- Exceeding Posted Speed Limit With Motorboat: F. Charles Ellis, 19, Oberlin, Kan., and Gary A. Gallentine, Norcorator, Kan., each $10 and costs.
- Drinking On State Property: Jerry W. Pruitt, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Virgil L. Barber, Conrad, F. Russ, Daniel L. Aquirre, Terry M. Keck, and Jerry W. Ohlman, all of Lincoln; Ralph L. Waltemire, Omaha; Everett J. Ketter, Guide Rock, and Jimmy U. Rezac, Garfield, each $10 and costs.
- Speeding in Zoned Areas: Melvin G. Rout, Wahoo, $30 and costs; Helmut Gerber, St. Paul, $15 and costs; and Scott D. Siebrass, 17, Louisville, $25 and costs.
- Entering Closed Beach Area: Keith D. Baker, Milford; Michael D. Horn, Elm Creek; Chester W. Bair, Sr., and Orville F. Fessler, both of Lincoln, and William E. Frohner, David City, each $10 and costs.

Rattlers' Age
A rattlesnake's age cannot be determined by counting the number of rings in its rattle, contrary to popular belief. A new ring is added each time the snake sheds its skin, but this may occur several times a year.

'Critter' Collection Compiled

Wildlife can be found throughout Nebraska almost anytime. But, when State Fair time comes around, the best place to look is the Game and Parks Commission's animal displays.

Once again this year, the Commission is assembling a collection of "critters" for the fair, September 2 through 8, that will delight visitors and at the same time serve an important educational purpose. As Nebraskans get to know their animal neighbors better, they will probably think more about the fact that wildlife habitat and man's environment have the same problems.

Fair-goers can learn about a number of different Nebraska species, from perky kangaroo rats to the seldom seen bobcat. Prairie dogs, opossums, raccoons, ducks, geese, and many more will be on hand. Over a dozen kinds of snakes will be on display, including specimens of Nebraska's poisonous varieties. Other reptiles and amphibians will also be represented.

This year a new display has been added to the wildlife exhibit. A special enclosure for wood ducks will feature nesting boxes in a natural setting and give several pairs of beautiful wood ducks a chance to show off. The display re-creates a wood-duck nesting project which the Commission has begun in Nebraska.

But, the wildlife exhibit, along with the always-popular fish displays, are only a part of the Commission's State Fair program. Within the old west stockade will be a large pool, open for casting throughout the day, surrounded by a variety of displays of interest to the outdoorsman.

Also planned is a series of sportsmen's clinics and demonstrations, including such subjects as "How to Catch More Bass" and "How to Handle a Rifle". Wildlife and much, much more should again make the Commission's area a State Fair favorite.

Watching Gulls

White bass schools can often be located on Nebraska reservoirs by watching the gulls, especially in late summer. The gulls mark the white bass school's location when they gather to feed on bait fish that the bass pursue to the surface.

Crappie Alias

Black crappie go by many aliases across the U.S. Names include calico bass, strawberry bass, papermouth, tinmouth, grass bass, and speckled crappie.

Catfish Award

Flathead catfish must weigh at least 15 pounds to qualify for a Nebraska Master Angler Award.

that backed up into the hills, blue and clear but wind whipped in what sister-in-law described as “a normal Holt County Zephyr.”
“If they can call Chicago the ‘Windy City’ they sure could call this the ‘Windy County,’” she quipped, with a good deal of justification as we watched the ripples marching in good order on the surface of the lake.

Hunting Regulations to Be Set

Regulations for Nebraska's 1971 upland game bird, waterfowl, and trapping seasons will be set at a meeting of the Game and Parks Commissioners in Lincoln this Friday.

Interested individuals and game biologists will testify at the public hearing on the seasons at 9 a.m. at the Commission's headquarters building at 2200 North 33rd Street. Commissioners will then decide bag and possession limits, shooting hours, and closing dates for pheasants, quail, and grouse. Opening dates were decided earlier this year.

Plattsmouth Requests Heavy

Several hundred applications for blind reservations at Plattsmouth Waterfowl Management Area for the 1971 waterfowl season have been received by the Game and Parks Commission, and they are still coming in.

Applications will be accepted until the 11 a.m. public drawing on September 7, which will determine the lucky hunters who will have the use of a blind for a full day for themselves and up to three guests.

Forms may be obtained by

Requests Heavy

writing the Game and Parks Commission, P.O. Box 30370, Lincoln, Neb. 68503, or in person at the Commission headquarters, 2200 North 33rd Street, Lincoln.

Hunting at Plattsmouth will run from October 15 through December 15, providing those recommended dates are approved by the Game Commissioners at their meeting on August 20. When submitting applications, gunners should not ask for a Wednesday, since the area is closed that day throughout the season.

Corn Price Drop Protested

Some 25-30 eastern Nebraska farmers last week tried to protest the recent drop in corn prices by dumping six truckloads of corn into the Missouri River from the Blair Bridge.

They were thwarted by local law enforcement officials, who cited a state law prohibiting the dumping of “rubbish” into public rights of way.

Agreeing that their produce, at $1.05 a bushel, is “rubbish,” the still dissident farmers headed home while crop observers looked for a record corn crop of 5.3 billion bushels this year. Local estimates indicate that Nebraska farmers will produce 92 bushels an acre on 5,583,000 acres for a record crop of 513,636,000 bushels.

Record crops are also expected in winter wheat and oats and near records in sorghum and sugar beets.

Mayor Plans Housing Advisory B

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has announced to residents of Tent City, 22nd and Vine, that he plans to appoint a Mayor's Housing Advisory Board to develop and recommend programs to solve the city's housing problems.

Those problems, according to Bea Richmond, president of the City-Wide Tenants Assn., are critical and, despite city promises, the housing shortage is getting worse, she said.

The Tent City families — 28 of them Thursday in 20 tents — are trying to dramatize their plight in the hopes that action can be taken to make adequate housing available for the poor. Some 1.5% of low income homes are vacant, the Statewide

Coalition for Housing said.

Some Tent City residents have money to pay for housing but find that landlords will not take large families or that rents and other costs are too steep for their low income budgets.

Schwartzkopf said he is “very cognizant” of the problems in low income housing and said he would take under advisement a Tent City recommendation that a public vote be taken on whether or not tax funds should be used for housing.

The Tent City dramatization of needs received the prompt endorsement of the Lincoln Action Program (LAP) as well as other state and local organizations concerned with the problems of the poor.

Lincoln in Brief

James Strauss, local developer of Wellington Green, won city council approval for a zoning change that will allow him to construct a shopping-residential center on a 44-acre tract at 84th and Van Dorn . . . Bernard Hardesty has been appointed to the State Real Estate Commission from the first congressional district . . . Lincoln Jaycees and state patrolmen “arrested” four families traveling on I-80 Wednesday and showed them a sample of Lincoln hospitality . . . Political observers speculate that Lincolinites Jerry Kronenberg and Bill Davidson, both longtime political allies of Gov. Exon, are being considered for appointment to the state posts of manpower planning coordinator (Kronenberg) and Lancaster County Election Commissioner.

Sonny's Delight Triumphs

Columbus — Sonny's Delight broke last, but rallied in the last 4-mile to score a three-length verdict in the $2,500 Husker Handicap over 5 1/2 furlongs Saturday at Agricultural Park.

In defeating five others, Sonny's Delight earned $1,500 and increased her 1971 collection to $19,056. Her record this year is three wins, three seconds and four thirds.

Her 1:05 4/5 clocking establishing a track record, napping the previous standard of 1:06 2/5 by Rowdy Boots on Sept. 2, 1968.

First National Wins Lincoln's Area Junior Baseball Tourney

Lincoln's First National Bank nine claimed the Capital City berth in the state American Legion Junior baseball tournament by edging Lincoln Amco, 8-6, in the championship contest.

The Southeast-stocked First National Club passed its first test in the state tournament, 2-1, Hastings by nipping Norfolk, 5-4.

In other first round games Omaha Gateway defeated Omaha Dugdales, 4-1; North Platte blanked Papillion, 9-0 and Grand Island thumped Hastings, 12-8.

Grand Island and Omaha Gateway remained unbeaten in second round play. The Omaha club defeated First National, 10-2, and Grand Island topped North Platte, 5-1. Hastings ousted Papillion, 4-2, and Omaha Dugdales eliminated Norfolk, 6-2, in loser's bracket games.

Judds, Lincoln's entry in the state American Legion Midget tournament in North Platte, was eliminated in the first round by LaVista, 3-0.

Camps Open

Training camps for the Shrine Bowl football game and the Coaches' All-Star basketball game were opened at Fremont, Crete, Wayne and Kearney.

Lincoln East all-star Kent Reekwey limped through the early drills at the South basketball camp in Kearney while recovering from a pre-camp ankle sprain.

The two Shrine Bowl squads made their annual visit to the Crippled Children's Hospital in Minneapolis to highlight their first week in camp.

Terry Running For Senate

"If people are happy with conditions, I have no chance at all," said Scottshuff Sen. Terry Carpenter in announcing his official candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Sen. Carl Curtis.

"But I think they're unhappy," he said. "They want activity and leadership and they know I can promise I would not be passive."

Carpenter's announcement, coming as no surprise to observers of his recent switch to the Democratic party, makes him the second official candidate in what could be a crowded Democratic field.

The other announced Democratic contender is Phyllis Lyons of McCook, but possible future entries include former Gov. Frank Morrison, Omaha; Don Ferguson, Lincoln; Wallace C. Peterson, Lincoln; Donald Searcy, Kearney, and state Sen. Wayne Ziebarth, Wilcox.

NEBRASKA Land Marks

The Sutton Youth Council won the Outstanding Youth Community of the Year award at the Nebraska Conference on Youth.

With controversy raging, the Omaha City Council Tuesday banned topless entertainment in Omaha bars and clubs.

Keith D. Kemper, business manager of the Alliance Daily Times-Herald since 1964, has succeeded his father, the late Gene Kemper, as publisher of the paper.

A former Scottshuff minister, Jim Smith, 42, died Wednesday in a one-car accident in New Mexico that left a son, Mark, 7, in critical condition.

Eight-year-old Dennis Loftshult of South Sioux City, lost for two days on Harney Peak in South Dakota, was found tired, hungry and thirsty but in good condition Wednesday.

Donkey Ball Games Scheduled

Lincoln is in store for something different in the entertainment and sports agenda this week. The something different is a set of donkey ball games, sponsored jointly by the Lincoln Foot-printers Assn. and the Lincoln Optimists Club.

"The last time Lincoln had a donkey ball game was 23 years ago, and it was quite a success," promoter William Seacrest said. "That time the game was between the Navy Club and some other prominent citizens."

The first donkey ball game is slated for Thursday night at Sherman Field, pitting the Lincoln Police Department against radio and television personnel.

The second game, also at Sherman Field, will feature the Lincoln Fire department against Lincoln newspapermen.

According to Seacrest, game time for both contests will be 7:30 p.m. Proceeds from the games will go into the Foot-printers youth fund which is used to provide a scholarship for a young man who is continuing his education in the law enforcement field.

The Lincoln Optimist Club will be on hand at both games to provide refreshments. Proceeds from their sales will go into the Optimist youth fund, also for scholarship use.

Veterans Join Omaha Mustangs

Omaha — Les Webster, Omaha Mustangs fullback of the past several seasons, has returned to the team for the 1971 season. Webster played football for Iowa State and Omaha Tech High.

Also returning to the team are linebackers John Skipper and Morrie Bantner. Skipper is a member of the Omaha Police Department and Bant-

Trapshoot Set At Beatrice

Beatrice — The Beatrice Gun Club is sponsoring an ATA registered trapshoot beginning Saturday at 1 p.m. with three events scheduled.

Sixteen-yard targets, handicap targets and 25 pairs of doubles will be held with trophies being awarded. All ties will be shot off.

Siderowf Wins

Oakfield, N.S. (P) — Dick Siderowf of Easton, Conn., won the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship Saturday by sinking a 20-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Graham Gets Lead In Massachusetts

Sutton, Mass. (P) — Lou Graham, winless on the pro golf tour since 1967, charged into the third-round lead of the $165,000 Massachusetts Classic Saturday despite a one-stroke penalty on the last hole at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Graham, a 33-year-old veteran and from Nashville, Tenn., had to settle for a five-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 207 after he was penalized under a rigid PGA rule governing the moving of a ball.

He picked up a piece of bark about three feet from his ball after driving into trees on the 18th fairway. He walked away "three of four minutes later" returned to find the ball had moved in weeds.

He reported the incident to playing partner DeWitt Weaver and, after finishing the round told a PGA official, Jack Sterling, who invoked the penalty because the ball moved after Graham picked up the bark within one club's distance.

Former Drug User Calls Buddhism Natural High

The following story was written as an assignment in the University of Nebraska School of Journalism Depth Reporting Class. The student reporter also writes for The Sunday Journal and Star Family News Section.

By LINDA ULRICH

The "Wild Haven" room of the Lincoln Hotel was overflowing with men, women, children and noise. "Good evening," the leader shouted. "Good evening," the audience shouted back. "Let's have some songs," the leader yelled. "Young Women's Division, 'You Are My Sunshine.'" About 15 young women came to the front of the room and began singing as the audience clapped in time.

More songs, announcement of new appointments and reports from the district leaders were met with cheers. It was the first "kick-off" conference for the Lincoln District. The Navy blazers and yachtsman's caps worn by some men and the emblem on many of the participant's shirts — a pilot's wheel with the words "Seattle Convention 1971" — symbolized the purpose of the meeting, to generate enthusiasm to increase the number of persons attending the Seattle convention in July.

A Rotary Convention? Not quite. Would you believe a Buddhist Convention?

The group's mood changed from boisterous to quietly reverent as young and old alike got down on their knees and took Juzu (prayer beads) from pocket and purse. "Nam-myoho-enge-kyo" the group chanted with heads bowed as the 108 beads (each one representing one of the 108 earthly desires) were intertwined among fingers, helping the chanters concentrate. Approximately 100 conference participants — the majority non-Japanese — repeated the Oriental shants easily.

Buddhism, a religion founded in the Far East, is steadily growing in numbers in Eastern Nebraska, according to Ralph Hicken, Buddhist Lincoln District leader. The Lincoln members belong to the Nichiren Shoshu sect of Buddhism (translated from Japanese as "the true religion").

Chapters in Five Cities

Calling it the fastest growing philosophy in the world, Hicken said there are 250,000 Buddhists in the United States and about 200 in Nebraska. The first Buddhist chapter in Nebraska was started five years ago at Sidney. In addition to Sidney and Lincoln, there are districts at Grand Island, Council Bluffs and Omaha.

Although some members are Japanese and students interested in Eastern philosophy, Buddhists here encompass a wide variety of ages and occupations, including doctors, businessmen, factory workers.

The reason Midwesterners become Buddhists are as numerous as the number of Buddhists. But according to Dr. Keith Stephenson, assistant professor of religion at the Cotner School of Religion on the University of Nebraska campus, the interest in Buddhism is partially due to the fact that since World War II, U.S. involvement in China, Korea, Japan and now Vietnam, has caused a great increase in cultural interchange with these countries.

In addition, "as a critic of all religions, I would say one of religion's attractions is that historically it has also provided people an escape from pressing problems," Dr. Stephenson said. "And Buddhism does an outstanding job of providing this escape."

Buddhist philosophy centers around chanting Gongyo (morning and evening prayers) to the Gohonzon, a scroll usually enclosed in a black box similar to an altar.

According to the Sept. 14 issue of the World Tribune, a Buddhist newspaper, "Gongyo is not Japanese but a combination of Sanskrit and Chinese." It also explains that "Gongyo is an international sound and Buddhism is not Japanese, but a practice for all human beings."

In addition to the Gohonzon, the altar usually contains incense to purify the air, candles for light, evergreen to symbolize the eternity of life and the offering (usually fruit, but one altar contained boxes of Jell-O, another a can of pie filling) to symbolize faith.

Although the Gohonzon contains "the laws of the universe," believers do not really chant to the scroll but rather regard it as a symbol towards which their chanting can be directed.

After the Gongyo, chanters repeat "Nam-myoho-enge-kyo," which means "devotion to the mystic law of cause and effect."

Get Anything You Want

Buddhists believe chanting gains harmony with the universe, and members chant for material as well as spiritual things because as one member explained, "We don't live in a spiritual world alone." They believe "you can get anything you want if you just chant." By chanting, members hope to bring out the bad karma in themselves, so what is left will be good. According to Hicken, karma is the pattern of life each individual has established.

But the reasons for chanting include an even larger goal—that of world peace. Buddhist philosophy maintains that each individual must start with himself and make his life happy. If all the individuals in a society are happy then that society will be happy and if all societies are happy, then there will be a happy world with no more war.

The chants are memorized from the Lotus Sutra (prayer book) written by Sakyamuni Buddha who lived in India 3,000 years ago.

Smiles Are Conspicuous

Buddhist meetings have incense, beads and chanting, but the most conspicuous feature is the smiles. Mary is one of those smiling persons.

Mary, a bubbly 22-year-old with huge brown eyes and short brown hair, grew up in a small Nebraska town where she was middle child in a family of three daughters. Her father is an insurance salesman, her mother a housewife. The family regularly attends the local Presbyterian church.

She was a high school cheerleader who sang in the church choir but she remembers her high school years as "miserable . . . a constant battle . . ."

"During my sophomore year I became aware of all kinds of questions and no one had any answers . . . nothing made any sense," she said. "I didn't see any reason for being alive." In the spring of 1967, she got her high school diploma and "the next day I split."

Mary began using drugs but "it was a self-awareness trip. I became more conscious of my own shortcomings and became more and more introverted . . . nothing gave me a satisfactory answer," the young Buddhist said.

She worked in Texas the summer after high school graduation and while she was there she tried to commit suicide by slashing her wrists, taking an overdose of sleeping pills and trying to jump off a cliff when she was "stoned."

Her mother made her "see a shrink" and she later tried Zen, yoga and transcendental meditation but as Mary said, "I was still trying to figure out what the hell I was here for."

In the fall, she left Houston and started attending Kearney State College but quit at the end of the school year because "school bored me." She moved to Denver but in the fall of 1969 enrolled at Kearney State again.

By the end of October she stopped going to classes altogether, sold her books one day when she needed money and then "just tried to stay stoned all the time."

In January, 1970, Mary and two other persons were arrested for possession of marijuana. They were sentenced to jail for 10 days.

After she was released her parents posted bond, and she went home to await trial since she was suspended from school. In March, the charges against her were dropped due to an improperly obtained search warrant.

After she was released from jail she began using drugs again. A friend from college told her about Buddhist meetings being held in Lincoln.

She was impressed with the friendliness and happiness that characterized the meetings and gradually began chanting. But the real turning point came when she went up to Denver one weekend in July and "just out of curiosity" stopped at the Buddhist church there. The priest performed the conversion ceremony and she received her Gohonzon.

But the real question is not how persons become members of a certain religious faith but why — what meaning does it give their life?

For Mary, the answer to that question is a series of before-and-afters.

"After I became a Buddhist, my father wanted to try chanting too," she said. "He just couldn't believe that I'm the same person."

Drugs Now Unnecessary

One of the most radical changes was that she stopped using drugs. "Even after I started chanting I still smoked (marijuana) but I soon found I didn't need that anymore."

"Chanting gives you a high . . . your mind is beautifully, naturally high," Mary said. "I never wanted to grow up enough to accept responsibility," she continued, "but now I want responsibility."

Before she became interested in Buddhism, Mary thought "organizations were real hummers." But now she believes, "We're involved in a human revolution . . . a revolution like the world has never seen because it's going to work and to accomplish a goal of world peace, there has to be organization, super organization."

Mary takes an active part in the Saturday evening meetings, the newly formed file and drum corps, educational seminars, the Sunday morning services at Omaha and the various conventions.

The Saturday evening meetings are devoted to philosophical discussion and are held in members' homes, often at the Hicken home in Malcolm. The meetings are devoted to chanting, songs (always followed by shouts of A-A-O (kind of a Japanese hip-hip-hooray), discussions of philosophy taken from "The Seikyo Times" magazine and discussions of the benefits individual members have received from chanting.

Although Buddhism in this country closely follows that of Buddhist countries, several adaptations are made for the western world. For example, the hazy defined state of Nirvana — which sometimes is referred to as a state of being after death in which one is released from earthly sorrows — is deemphasized and instead members concentrate on attaining happiness now.

In traditional Japanese Buddhism, the concept of Shakabuku — removing false beliefs and replacing them with truth — is emphasized but the concept as such is not practiced in this country.

Instead, as Hicken explained, "In any non-Buddhist country, practicing Buddhists say 'whatever philosophy you endorse has some correct points but let us show you a higher philosophy.'"

Clay Center, Tecumseh Churches

New Churches will be built at Clay Center and Tecumseh, it was announced recently.

A new First United Presbyterian Church will be built at the corner of Fifth and Broadway in Tecumseh where the old church was razed. The new house of worship was contracted for $132,000 by Louis Haack of Johnson.

The United Church of Christ of Clay Center will have a ground-breaking ceremony today for its new building at 220 So. Alexander, site of the present building which will be razed after Aug. 21. Construction of the $99,000 project is scheduled to begin Sept. 1 by Fast Construction Co. of Hastings, general contractor.

Strange how home life can shape our attitudes! Practically every reaction of every human being is somehow affected by what he was exposed to as a child at home. Parental control, love and affection — they go a long way in deciding how an adult will treat his own children. Of course, relationships with other children, associations at school — these too have relevance where the formation of an adult is concerned. You see how careful we must be that our children come in contact with the best kinds of influence!

We thoroughly enjoy visiting Pioneer's Park, especially the animal pen area. But recently, we were concerned when a reindeer on a hot, sticky day was covered with flies, appearing to drive him crazy. Can't there be some control of these insects?
—Concerned, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The animal pen areas, like the picnic area, says Walter Bunnell of the park department, are sprayed periodically in an all-out effort to reduce the insect population. Frankly, says Bunnell, with a nearby creek plus the animal feces, it is impossible to kill all insects. Too much spraying will cause the poisons to accumulate in the soil and create a hazard to the animals, he said.

Bunnell will check the insect situation for you.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, AUGUST 15, 1971 SECTION D

Governor Saves State $17,275 On Salaries Paid Top Employees

One of Gov. J. J. Exon's major criticisms of Republican Gov. Norbert Tiemann's administration was the cost of state government, and particularly the salaries paid some top employees.

Exon maintained both before and after his election triumph that qualified people can be attracted to state government without matching salaries paid under Tiemann.

Basically, the governor has proved his point.

With a few exceptions, the Exon administration has been able to name men to top positions at salaries that are generally lower than those paid to their predecessors at the end of the Tiemann administration.

But a comparison of salaries for 23 positions in state government shows that while salaries of new appointees are generally lower, the difference in comparing total costs is not particularly significant.

At the end of the Tiemann administration, salaries for the 23 positions totaled $387,130. With Exon's new appointees, the salaries total $369,855 — or $17,275 less than at the end of the Tiemann administration.

With one exception, top employees under Exon did not receive salary increases this year, since most had been at their jobs only a few months.

The single exception was State Patrol Supt. James Kruger, a carry-over from the Tiemann administration. Kruger, who had not received a salary hike for about two years under Tiemann, had his salary increased from $16,380 to $17,160.

Two other Tiemann carry-overs who remained at their same jobs, Adjutant General Lyle Welch and Water Resources Director Dan Jones, did not receive salary increases.

A fourth Tiemann carry-over, Thomas Doyle, switched from the job of labor commissioner to state engineer. That switch earned a $2,000 a year salary increase, but his new salary as engineer is still lower than his predecessor's.

Two Exon administration appointments that have drawn criticism from Republican Party spokesmen were in the corrections area.

Under Tiemann, Maurice Sigler held the jobs of Penal Complex warden and Corrections Dept. director for a single salary of $19,580.

When Sigler resigned to become a member of the U.S. Parole Board, two men were named to replace him for a combined salary of $31,125.

Lincoln Boy, Banner Co. Youth Drown

Lincoln recorded its first drowning of the year when Terry A. Bodfield, 6, 4302 Carswell, fell off the east docks at Bowling Lake in the Lincoln Air Park industrial complex about 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Terry was accompanied by two friends at the time of the accident. He was the son of Terry Bodfield and Mrs. Peggy Bodfield, both of Lincoln.

The Scotts Bluff County sheriff's office reported that Craig Brown, 18, of Banner County drowned while swimming with two friends in Cochran Lake west of Minatare Saturday.

Mr. Brown and a companion, Jack Cochran, were swimming to a raft about 100 yards from shore when Mr. Brown began calling for help. He went under before Cochran was able to reach him.

Boy Believed Abandoned Near Falls City Five-Year-Old's Parents Sought

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Falls City — "Daddy told me to get out and then he closed the car door. I tried to get back in, but he drove off so fast I couldn't."

Smiling like it was all a game of hide-and-seek, a small boy calling himself Bruce Edward Bell thus explained his surprise appearance at a farmhouse here late Friday night.

Police Chief Blaine Sailors said the lad — who says he is five and "from someplace in Minnesota" — was believed abandoned. After walking approximately a quarter-mile, he knocked at the door of the Quallis McGinnis home about 11 p.m.

The house is located about a mile south of Falls City and three-fourths of a mile east of U.S. 73 on a gravel road. The McGinnis' teenage daughter, Sarah, admitted the boy and was told he had been instructed to "walk to your burning yard light."

Unusually bright and outgoing, the boy has repeatedly told Sailors the same story. He says his father's name is Jim Bell, his mother's Sharon, and that "my sister Jane is seven and baby Jimmy is eight months."

He has told authorities his father "works at a store," but has been unable to recall any town. There was some hesitancy as he indicated the family left home ("a big yellow house") only one or two days ago.

Brown-eyed and dark-skinned, Bruce appears to be at least part Indian or Spanish American. Sailors said he came to the farm wearing a white knit shirt, blue shorts and good leather shoes — all quite clean.

The chief noted, however, that the boy bore scars on both ankles and both wrists. The youngster told him these came from "being tied up many days to a broom and a mop."

"He'd fallen on the gravel and skinned a knee, so we took him to a doctor," Sailors said. "But otherwise he was all right, just plenty hungry. And unbelievably, he hasn't shed a tear."

The Nebraska State Patrol and other law enforcement agencies have been alerted to watch for a grayish-blue car, possibly a Pontiac, bearing Minnesota license plates. A car answering that description was seen in downtown Falls City Friday afternoon.

Sailors said no woman was seen at the time but that the auto's passengers did include a small boy and girl. The driver was described as "a short dark man wearing blue jeans."

Pending further developments, the boy is being cared for by Sailors and his wife.

Hospital Rate Review Plan Given Lukewarm Reception by Experts

By BESS JENKINS
Optimism of the Nebraska Hospital Assn. for its reimbursement plan to hold down patient costs by rate reviewing procedures might suffer somewhat if the proposal were reviewed by outsiders as well as the current association membership.

Of three health care experts examining the rate review plan separately, one showed enthusiasm for it. And this was tempered by an observation that "giving a hospital a choice to participate or not in the state review process is one of the weaknesses."

Verne Pangborn, hospital and medical facilities director for the State Health Dept., explained that "any sizable group of hospitals staying out will seriously hamper the entire program."

Concern about the credibility of the rate review mechanism when it does not involve "active informed consumer participation" comes from William Heavey of Omaha.

It was Heavey, as president of Nebraska Blue Cross, who urged Nebraska Hospital Assn. officials last fall to help establish a rate reviewing committee before which each hospital would have to justify patient cost increases.

Heavey and Stuart Mount, association executive director, confirm that a meeting has been sought by Blue Cross with the special hospital reimbursement committee task force to discuss lack of active consumer participation.

According to a copy of the hospital reimbursement plan furnished by Mount, it provides for an advisory committee (of seven to 11 persons) to represent the general consumer public.

One hospital association meeting is scheduled Tuesday in Lincoln, another Wednesday in Omaha. Others already held outstate were closed meetings so "members will talk freely."

Mount said the hospital association hopes to have a plan ready for activation by October.

Procedure Outlined
Generally, this is how a participating hospital's budget and rate setting procedure would be processed: The board of Hospital A determines its budget for the year and the patient rates necessary to operate the facility.

The approved package is then submitted to the plan director, who reviews it to determine that guidelines and regulations provided to Hospital A were followed. If not, the director works with the submitting hospital to correct variances.

If the director and Hospital A cannot reconcile these differences, the former forwards all materials to the evaluation board.

If the evaluation board also disagrees with Hospital A's recommended rates, it notifies the hospital in writing why it disapproves the costs and informs the plan director to work again with the hospital.

The matter goes on to the rate review committee if there is still no forthcoming solution. The proposed plan states the rate review committee "is the final administrative authority as to certification of the rates."

If the rate review committee rejects the rate proposal, it goes back to Hospital A, which can start all over again or decide it's going to charge the rates it wants, regardless.

The plan recognizes that since the Hospital A board is legally responsible for medical care standards and accountable for inadequacies of resources, it must "reserve for itself that power to determine rates for financial stability of the hospital."

Nonprofit Return?
"It certainly looks strange to see in print that a nonprofit hospital must have a return on its investment," commented an outside health professional worker who asked to remain anonymous.

Labeling it a document that might have been a "challenge in the 1940's," the critic said the plan represents a "sick tax. We're all potential hospital users, but it's the person who gets sick and is hospitalized who has to pick up the bill for the patient unable to pay so the hospital won't have a loss and research and education can go on."

Debate Flares Over New Meat Inspection Plan

By Associated Press
A debate flared up Saturday over Gov. J. J. Exon's decision to invite the federal government to take over the entire Nebraska meat inspection program.

State Sen. Orval Keyes of Papillion said the decision is fraught with "grotesque" possibilities for Nebraska consumers. State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher said this was "scare talk" and termed it "absurd."

Sen. Keyes said it is possible Nebraska consumers will be buying "luncheon meats and wieners containing excessive fats and more nonmeat additives, bacon and ham pumped with water and other dilutions and substandard practices."

Said Kreuscher, "Even Sen. Keyes knows that federal inspection has long provided a high quality service to 90% of all meat processed in Nebraska and that all guidelines for meat inspection in the nation are based on the Federal Wholesome Meat Act."

Goals, Policies Committee's Third Video Town Meeting

Interest Shown in Winter Sports

By DICK HAWS
Apparently Lincolinites want greater variety and development of winter sports facilities in the city.

That's the question dealing with recreational facilities on the Lancaster County Goals and Policies Committee survey which received the greatest response from Lincolinites — 132 as opposed to the second finisher — 123 for lake and stream development.

Winter recreation, as well as other park and recreation development, educational facilities, and the environment, will be the topics up for discussion at the third Video Town Meeting (VTM), Wednesday night at 7:30.

The VTM, a modern-day version of the old New England town meeting, is the city of Lincoln's way of determining citizen opinion on the future of their metropolitan area.

A special citizen committee — called the Goals and Policies Committee — has devised along with planning consultant Bill Coibion, a set of 12 goals and numerous subgoals.

During the first two Wednesdays in August, the first five goals were discussed. Next Wednesday, Aug. 25, the last four goals will be discussed.

This Wednesday's telecast will be divided into two segments. During the first, from 7:30 to 8:00 p.m., Coibion and the Rev. Robert Jeambey, Goals and Policies Committee chairman, will review the evening's goals and subgoals.

At 9:30, the citizen participation portion of the program will begin in which Lincolinites can call in and respond to the various committee goals, which ultimately will be used to develop a new comprehensive plan for the city.

A citizen panel will be available to answer the telephoned questions.

Parks, Recreation Facilities

GOAL F — Provide a diverse regional network of parks and recreational facilities which afford all residents with convenient access to a wide range of recreational opportunities for continued expansion of parks and recreation facilities as they become needed.

F-1—Year-Round Recreation
Provide year-round recreation opportunities with emphasis placed upon development of winter sports facilities.

Echoing the concerns of the Lincolinites as expressed in the survey, the Goals and Policies Committee included as their first subgoal, the upgrading of Lincoln's winter recreation facilities.

Interestingly, Lincolinites placed a significantly lesser degree of importance on the development of new golf courses and major parks.

F-2—Natural Resources

Unique natural areas such as stream course and wooded areas should be considered as possible recreation resources and be developed with recreation facilities of a nature which would not destroy their natural qualities.

Lincolinites consider trees extremely important. Some 87% of those who responded to the survey and 85% of the Goals and Policies Committee members called trees extremely important to their environment.

Lakes and streams were also deemed important to the community with some 73% of the survey respondents and 72% of the committee members indicating their significance. This subgoal reflects those interests.

F-3—Active Recreation Areas

Active recreation areas (swimming pools, tennis courts, etc.) and playgrounds should be generally distributed throughout residentially developed areas in the community; joint provision of such uses in conjunction with appropriate school sites is desirable.

One of the implications of this subgoal may be that developers could be required to provide such recreational areas in new subdivisions.

The survey indicated a significant number of the community felt development of these active recreational areas was important to the city.

F-4—Primitive areas

Provide for some currently wild areas to remain primitive and not develop with recreational facilities.

If there was any common thread which was woven through both the survey and the committee it was simply the concern for and protection for the environment displayed by many of the participants.

For instance, 59% of the community and 68% of the committee felt roadside litter was a very serious problem in rural areas.

It is probably this environmental concern which led to the development of Lincoln's Wilderness Park — a wild, primarily untouched, natural area along Salt Creek south of Lincoln.

F-5—Historical Interest

Preserve historic monuments and structures and sites of historical interest.

While not rating as one of the most significant concerns of the residents, a large number of the committee members felt it was necessary to protect and preserve Lincoln's heritage.

Educational Facilities

GOAL G — Maximize educational opportunities for all segments of the population to avail themselves of a high quality educational program which continually keeps pace with changing social values and economical environmental conditions and is supported by a high quality system of educational facilities.

G-1—Regular Facilities

Regular school facilities (elementary, junior high and high schools) throughout Lancaster County, in coordination with the Comprehensive Plan, in a manner which would provide for reasonable and efficient service areas: elementary schools should be developed as integral components of residential neighborhoods.

This subgoal implies the acquisition of school sites prior to development of surrounding areas would assure proper distribution and provide economic savings. Dedication of school sites could be required of subdividers.

G-2—Special Programs

Adequate special school facilities, and or programs, should be provided as required to meet particular needs such as adult education, vocational education, and education for emotionally, mentally, and physically handicapped or special students; joint use of regular school facilities is desirable for some special purposes.

Both the survey and the Goals and Policies Committee agreed special education facilities were "considerably lacking at present" in Lincoln.

This subgoal addresses itself to that feeling.

G-3—Joint Use

Coordinated development and joint use of school sites and recreation areas will result in better service at reduced cost for each facility.

The survey indicated that on the question dealing with education, the most often the question dealing with the need for the joint use of schools and parks.

G-4—Coordinated expansion

Existing universities and colleges are recognized as valuable educational, economic, cultural and physical assets to the community and, as such, should be encouraged to expand as necessary in a manner compatible with surrounding areas and beneficial to the community at large, and the universities and colleges should in turn be encouraged, as recognized members of the community, to make resources and facilities available to the community for the purpose of enhancing the quality of community living.

The implication of this goal is that as the University of Nebraska downtown campus expands, it does so under a coordinated plan such as that proposed in the Railroad Transportation Study, which recommends the overall redevelopment of the "urban corridor area" through the application of urban renewal.

G-5—Educational opportunities

Provide educational opportunities to extend individual talents and interests.

This subgoal is self-explanatory.

Environment

GOAL H — Provide and improve quality of environment which is ecologically sound, is healthful and safe, and is aesthetically pleasing, and recommends all governmental units will set a good example for the greater community in the high priority it places on quality environment and by its strict enforcement of environmental regulations.

H-1—Open Space

Preservation of natural physical features and open space in both urban and rural areas is important to maintaining the desired environmental quality.

Open space in urban areas as well as in rural areas was deemed by the respondents to the survey to be significant needs.

Such a subgoal could be accomplished through the implementation of zoning and subdivision requirements and through public expenditure for land acquisition.

H-2—Environmental Quality

Provision of an environmental free from the adverse visual and health effects of air, noise, water, and land pollution is important to creating the desired environmental quality.

Environmentally quality was deemed the prime concern of Lancaster County residents. About 89% of the survey respondents and 85% of the committee members agreed clean air was "very important" to the Lincoln environment.

Interestingly, 54% of the respondents listed pollution as a "serious problem," with which 46% of the committee found agreement.

H-3—Improving Older Areas

Efforts should be made to improve the environmental quality of older areas which evidence deterioration and to preserve those areas possessing good environmental qualities.

The survey determined that Lincolinites, by more than a two to one margin, favor a moderate approach to improving presently developed older areas emphasizing private improvements, but including some private improvement.

Code enforcement and redevelopment could be used in conjunction with this subgoal.

H-4—Standard of Design

New development should be required to respect the environmental values of the community through adherence to a high standard of design.

Subgoal is self-explanatory.

Community Position Goes To Mrs. Arnot

State Economic Development director Stanley A. Matzke Jr. announced the appointment of Mrs. Marie Arnot of Lincoln as director of community affairs.

Matzke said the appointment would become effective Sept. 1. Mrs. Arnot will replace Roger Massey, who will be joining the department of environmental development at the University of Nebraska.

Weather Service Considers July 'Unusually Cool'

July was an unusually cool month according to the National Weather Service, but it was the cold spell near the end of the month that really put the frost on the pumpkin blossom.

The state made national news when Agate in the Panhandle set the country's low mark July 30 with a reading of 29 degrees. At least 46 cities across the state set new month of July low temperature records, some of which replaced turn-of-the-century record lows.

It was still July, of course, as evidenced by a monthly high temperature of 104 degrees measured July 7 in Red Cloud.

Precipitation was widely varied from site to site but most areas received above normal amounts of rain. The Panhandle and Omaha area were exceptions.

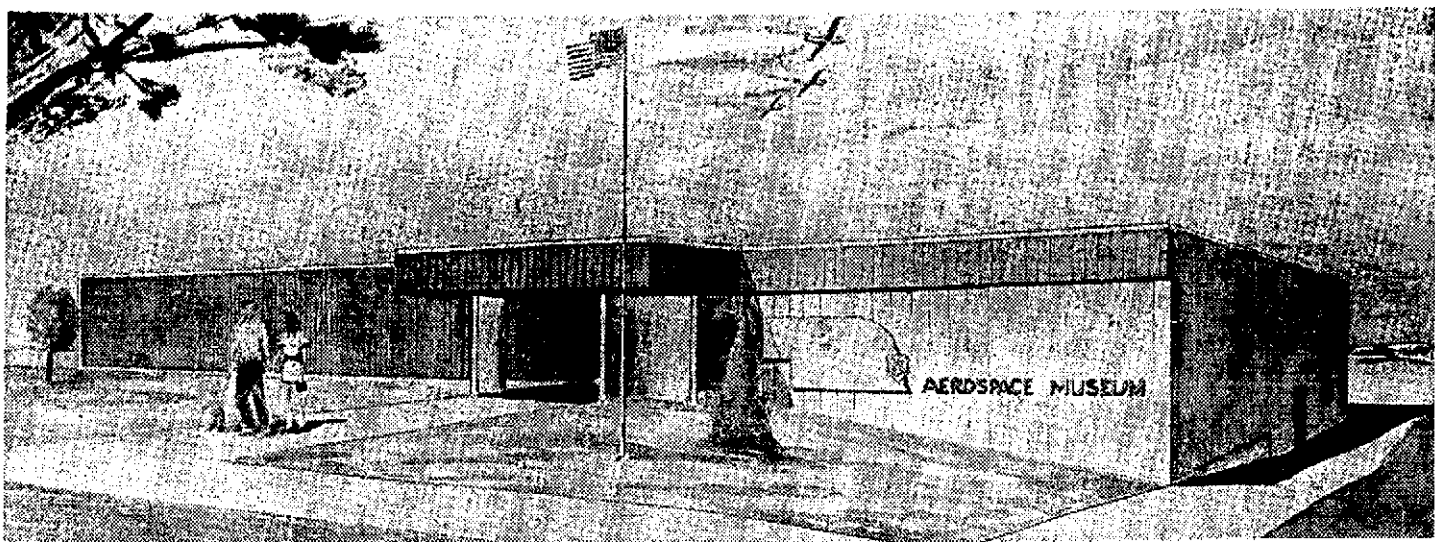

PO Closed On Labor Day

All departments of the main Lincoln Post Office and postal stations will be closed Labor Day, September 6, according to Postmaster Kenneth Lewis. Lewis said holiday collections will be made at all boxes at least once during the day. Normal delivery will be provided on the Saturday preceding the holiday.

Arndt to Retire

Columbus (UPI) — Raymond W. Arndt, administrative assistant in the Columbus general office of the Nebraska Public Power District, has announced he will retire Aug. 31.

Plans for Aerospace Museum Unveiled

Plans for a $240,000 aerospace museum at Offutt Air Force Base in Bellevue were unveiled by Omaha architect Willis Regeir at a meeting of the Game and Parks Commission. The commission deferred a decision on whether to build the structure until others, including the governor, have reviewed the plans.

Poll: Some Lincolinites Favor Tax Help on Low-Income Housing Sympathy Shown for Tent City Dwellers

By BOB SOSHNIK

A random sampling of Lincolinites indicates they sympathize with the efforts of Tent City residents; agree Lincoln is not meeting its needs for housing for low income people, and say they would be in favor of using some local tax money to help finance housing for low income groups.

The 60 people were questioned in an attempt to determine sentiment of Lincolinites in the wake of the erection of Tent City to protest alleged inadequacies in housing for low income groups.

Some 20 persons in each of three areas — Downtown, the 27th & Vine shopping area and Gateway — were all asked the same three questions: Do you sympathize with the efforts of Tent City residents? Do you feel Lincoln is meeting its needs for housing for low income people? Would you be in favor of using some local tax money to help finance housing for low income people?

If those questioned are representative of local residents' feelings, sympathy is with Tent City residents as 42 people, or 70% of those question answered. "Yes" to the first question.

Approximately 18.5% or 11 people said "No" with seven people, or 11.5% saying they had no opinion.

Of those who said they did sympathize with Tent City residents, many said they had "mixed emotions" though. One woman said she couldn't totally agree with what the (Tent City) residents were doing, "but nobody should have to live in a tent."

The Lincolinites questioned were the most united in their response to the second question. Approximately 78.5% said "no," Lincoln is not meeting its needs for housing for low income people.

Far fewer people said they had "mixed emotions" about the second question than about the first.

Six, or 10%, said they felt Lincoln is meeting its needs for housing and seven people comprising 11.5% said they had no opinion.

The final question brought responses typical when people are being asked about taxes, but 43 people representing 71.5% said they would be in favor of using some local tax money to help finance housing for low income groups.

Sixteen said they would be against local tax money being used and only one person questioned said he had no opinion concerning the use of local tax money.

Of the 43 who answered "Yes," many said they did so with reservations. A typical response was conditional to proper administration of the tax funds.

Several people offered that tax money could be diverted from the present cigaret tax which is being partially used to fund a new University of Nebraska-Lincoln fieldhouse to housing projects for low income groups.

Responses did not seem to be aligned with the location where the questions were asked as percentage totals did not vary significantly in the three locations.

Wheat Group To Meet Here

An official meeting of the Advisory Committee to the Division of Wheat Development, Utilization and Marketing, Nebraska Agriculture Dept. will be at 9 a.m. Thursday in the conference room of the Terminal Building, 10th and O.

The meeting will reconvene on Friday if necessary to complete the items of business on the agenda.

Cars Auctioned

Care Center Open House Set

County Welfare Director J. Earle Trabert announced that a public open house will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Sept. 19 at the Child Care Center, recently opened in the former St. Elizabeth nurses' home on Lancaster Manor campus.

This is the child care service operated with federal welfare funds under joint auspices of county welfare and Family Service Assn. Until recently, it was located in Trinity Methodist Church's education building.

By ROGER HIRSCH

If events continue as some would have them, one of the more lively and significant periodic government meetings would not be City Council or County Board, but the County-City Building Committee.

The committee has been meeting sporadically to discuss maintenance, repair, remodeling and other similar problems facing the building, now in its third year of existence.

Current members are Commissioners Kenneth Bourne and William Grossman and City Council representatives Helen Boosalis and Steve Cook. Commissioner Robert Colin and Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf would reportedly like to become members, which could prompt a City Council request to add another member.

Although of limited purpose, the committee remains virtually the only planned meeting of city and county officials to discuss common problems.

With the addition of the mayor and one or two others, some suggest the committee could evolve into an Interlocal Cooperation Committee — to discuss possible combination of governmental functions or services or similar pursuits of the county and city.

No permanent structure exists to discuss such possibilities despite the fact a recent poll indicated city and county residents felt strongly that Lincoln and Lancaster County should combine more services and government functions.

Such a phenomenon may be far in the future, however, as local governmental employees have suggested a spirit of cooperation between the county and city seems to be at a low ebb.

Infield Chatter

In the "Symbolic Signs of the Times" department, the city and Archer-Daniels-Midland (ADM) squared off in another endeavor outside cleaning up overloaded city lagoons the plant uses in northeast Lincoln.

The City Employees Assn. (CEA) girls softball team recently met an ADM team and defeated them 15-4.

Reports that infield chatter included "beat the dirty polluters" went unconfirmed.

'Temporary (?) Snow Fence'

What was described as a "three-year temporary snow fence" by City Councilman Steve Cook is likely to disappear from the edge of the north parking lot of the County-City Building.

At a recent meeting of the County-City Building Committee, architect Bill Schlaebitz explained the snowfence along the city-side parking lot was installed as a temporary measure, since the city had once anticipated proceeding with a second parking deck.

Rather than install a $3,000 permanent railing, said Schlaebitz, the city desired to install a temporary barrier. Now Schlaebitz has been asked to provide some figures for the committee's scheduled Sept. 14 meeting on the cost of a permanent railing.

'Just For Laughs'

One sure way for a county official to get his budget cut is to not have a reason — even a weak one — for a particular budget request.

Thus it was of some amusement when Register of Deeds Kenneth Ferguson — one of the more frugal-minded county officials — requested $1,000 for new equipment "just in case."

The commissioners immediately lopped off $500 and considered returning the request marked "just for laughs."

Judges May Be Borrowed

With a jury session coming up in September, and two district judges receiving medical treatment, at least one and perhaps two district judges from other Nebraska districts may be "borrowed" for the two-week session.

District judges may sit statewide, and despite the fact Lancaster's docket is up-to-date, the session is normally busy enough to warrant additional help.

45 Fairs, Herman Centennial On Tap

As the summer matures and the final harvest approaches, fairs have reached their peak in Nebraska. At least 45 counties will be holding annual fairs in the next two and a half weeks.

Herman will be celebrating its centennial Aug. 20-22, the last of four Washington County centennial celebrants. The three-day gala will feature the burial of a time capsule, visiting dignitaries and an automobile giveaway. The list:

UNO Expansion Opponent Talks

Omaha (UPI) — Mrs. Norman Batt, president of the Citizens' Action Assn., will discuss the group's opposition to the westward expansion of the University of Nebraska at Omaha at the Monday luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Goodfellowship Club.

Union, Spencer In Agreement On 'Concepts'

By United Press International
A union spokesman reported Saturday "concept" agreements have been reached on localized issues in a dispute which has idled 250 workers at four Spencer Foods Inc. plants since May. Jeff C. Spahn, business agent for Local 106 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO, made the report after returning to Lincoln from negotiating sessions being held at Sioux City, Iowa. The strike has idled workers at plants in Schuyler, Neb., Sioux Falls, S.D., Hartley, Iowa, and Spencer, Iowa. Spahn said negotiations will resume on Wednesday.

Pardon Hearings For Four

The State Board of Pardons has scheduled four cases for clemency hearings at 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 9, in the governor's hearing room at the Capitol.

Penitentiary inmate Kermit Keeshan, 30, Albion, will be considered for a commutation of sentence for two concurrent life terms given in 1953 for second-degree murder in the shooting of two high school students. If granted a commutation — recommended earlier by the State Board of Parole — Keeshan will be eligible for future parole. Two men will be considered for full pardons from felony convictions: Arthur L. Andersen, 28, California, who served a one to three-year term for no account check and violation of bench parole from Dodge County, beginning Oct. 1969. Clarence Kidd, 56, California, who served a three-year term for statutory rape from Thayer County beginning in Aug. 1935. Also to be heard is one applicant for full pardon from a misdemeanor conviction.

Your Horoscope

Jeane Dixon

FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1971
Your birthday today: This year is like a bridge from the past to a broader future — a training phase of your life. Select worthwhile studies, improvement programs. Home life is better as stronger emotional ties form subtly. Today's natives have a special knack for handling money, may develop and champion a serious cause for many years.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Set your own standards, begin fulfilling a normal quota. Nobody can really see your strength and limits accurately. Write your own ticket.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): For you the week doesn't really begin until tomorrow. If you must work today, keep to a minimum routine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Whatever and where you've promised, do all you can to make matters even. Friends and relatives are particularly sensitive to minor misunderstandings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Place emphasis on patience and tact. Friends must realize you are holding confidences very well on all sides and not likely to spill them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Let the week begin before you start pushing any serious rearrangement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being plain-spoken and definite moves you a long way towards your goals. Accidental social contacts provide possible fresh connections.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): While this complex week unfolds, put in the day returning favors, redeeming obligation, tidying up in general.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leaving glamor and publicity aside, select the basic tasks that really count, pitch in and get as much done on them as you can manage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your more important acts now relate to the welfare of your community — see that they are genuinely constructive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There's no way to prepare for surprise, shock at finding strangers, unexpected visitors mixed right into your pet projects.

NEBRASKA Landmarks

Veterans have been informed that if they are planning to go to school this fall they should initiate paperwork immediately to insure GI Bill educational benefits will be received when classes begin.

The number of cattle on feed in Nebraska feedlots as of Aug. 1 has been estimated at 4% below the same time last year and 6% below last month.

Regional Veterans Administration Director C. W. Nixon has said mobile homes and lots for them may be purchased under the GI loan program.

Omaha Area

All proceeds from a dance at St. Luke's Methodist Church Aug. 26 sponsored by the Greater Omaha Youth Association for Retarded Children will be used to further that group's work.

The Omaha Public Power District would like to have Union Pacific construct a one-mile stretch of railroad so that coal need not be transferred to the Chicago North Western Railway (C&NW) for delivery at the North Omaha Power Station but C&NW doesn't like the idea and may tie up the project with an objection to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Northeast

Platte Valley

What's Capt. Brian Kaufman's line? The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kaufman, Elm Creek, has been assigned as a navigator with the "hurricane hunters" stationed at Ramey Air Force Base in Puerto Rico.

Sandhills

Officials at the Burwell Rodeo report the biggest horse show ever, despite the quarantine on horses over much of the nation. They also reported that because the rodeo stock contractor from Oklahoma was unable to supply horses, some of the stock had to be brought in from Colorado and North Dakota.

Panhandle

Minatare will be home of Canadian Colossal, a $1 million, 2,500-pound nine-year-old Angus bull, believed to be the most valuable sire in America, after Aug. 29.

The summer theater at the Post Playhouse at Fort Robinson will close with four performances of the popular musical "I Do! I Do!" Wednesday through Saturday. The playhouse is sponsored by Chadron State College.

Wild West Show Plans Special Performance

North Platte—Montie Montana Jr., producer of the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show in North Platte, announced a series of special guest performances for the coming week.

Today's 2 p.m. matinee will have as guests handicapped children. Schools and associations for the handicapped are invited to bring the children.

Membership in any Nebraska farm organization will be sufficient for admission for Tuesday's 8 p.m. performance. Friday, those people who attended any performance of the original show which ran last in 1913 will be admitted free.

Saturday's show is "Boys Day" with invitations being issued to boy's homes in Nebraska for the matinee.

Next Sunday's matinee will be Indian Day with Nebraska Indians admitted free.

After the show's month-long run in North Platte, it will travel to Arizona, through California and the West Coast and on to Europe.

Tifereth Israel Sponsors Meet

Tifereth Israel Synagogue Sisterhood will hold a board of directors orientation and learning session at the Nebraska Center Monday.

Mrs. Henry Steinhaus of Kansas City, Mo., will be guest discussion leader for the all-day conference. She is an accredited discussion leader for the Jewish National Women's League and is vice president of Program and Education of the South District (Midwest Branch) of the National Women's League.

2 Goals In Drive

Immunization Surveillance

By BESS JENKINS

Beginning this September, the State Health Dept. immunization staff will be carrying on periodic correspondence with parents of all 3- and 18-month-old Nebraskans as well as with all elementary schools.

Two goals could be reached eventually through what immunization coordinator Bill Pack calls the department's first full-scale, continuing surveillance campaign:

With parent and school reporting cooperation, the department should be able to establish an official current record of the degree of immunization or protection of all children from certain childhood diseases.

If the mail campaign is successful in encouraging parents and schools to see that children are properly immunized during pre-school years, it could sharply reduce or virtually eliminate need for crash mass clinics.

Such clinics with federally-provided vaccine protection against red measles (rubella) and German measles (rubella), in cooperation with county medical societies and schools, have kept Pack busy since the U.S. Public Health Advisor was assigned to Nebraska two years ago to be the department's first immunization coordinator.

Surveys

Random immunization surveys made by Pack and his staff earlier this year in Lexington, Gering and Scottsbluff showed satisfactory but not desirable levels of protection for the average child between his 1st and 14th birthdays.

Pack said his experience in the three city survey supports need for an immunization record card which will go out in the department's first letter to parents of the three-month-old child.

A second letter with questionnaire return card will go to the same families when their child reaches 18 months of age. In this first year, Pack said such questionnaires also will go to families with 18-month-old children to expedite the surveillance gathering by use of state government's data processing.

All Nebraska elementary schools also will receive immunization record forms to be sent home with each child. Another form due Nov. 1 in Pack's office from school officials will show the number of kindergarten or first grade (pupils) students surveyed, and how many are fully, inadequately or not immunized at all against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis (whooping cough), polio, measles, rubella, smallpox, mumps and others. It also provides for a report on tuberculin skin testing results.

State Health Director Henry Smith notes the department recommends each child be completely up-to-date on immunizations before entering school.

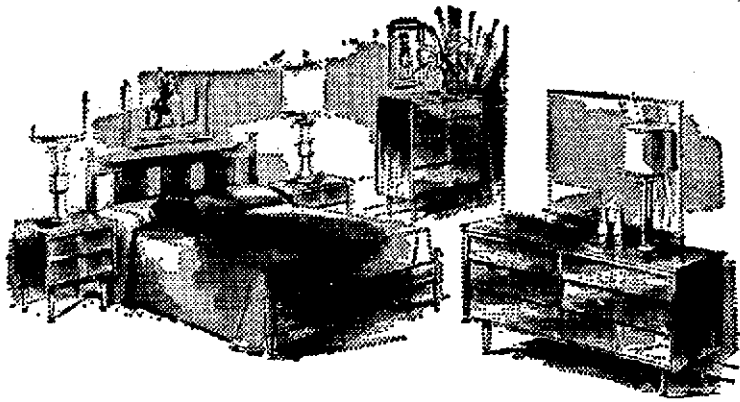

Permissive state legislation passed in 1967 give school boards the right to enforce such immunizations, Pack said. He observed few if any, however, have exercised this right but use the persuasive highly recommended route.

Pack said Nebraska is one of the few remaining states not embarked in this surveillance mail campaign, with one exception — Douglas County. He said that county will continue its earlier-established program independently through the Omaha-Douglas Health Dept.

House of the Week Ranch Has Western Atmosphere

By Associated Press

If you want luxury living in a Western atmosphere, this latest House of the Week (L10) is for you.

It's a rugged, low-slung, rambling Western ranch. An angled plan was used by architect Rudolph A. Matern to accentuate the rambling aspect of the house.

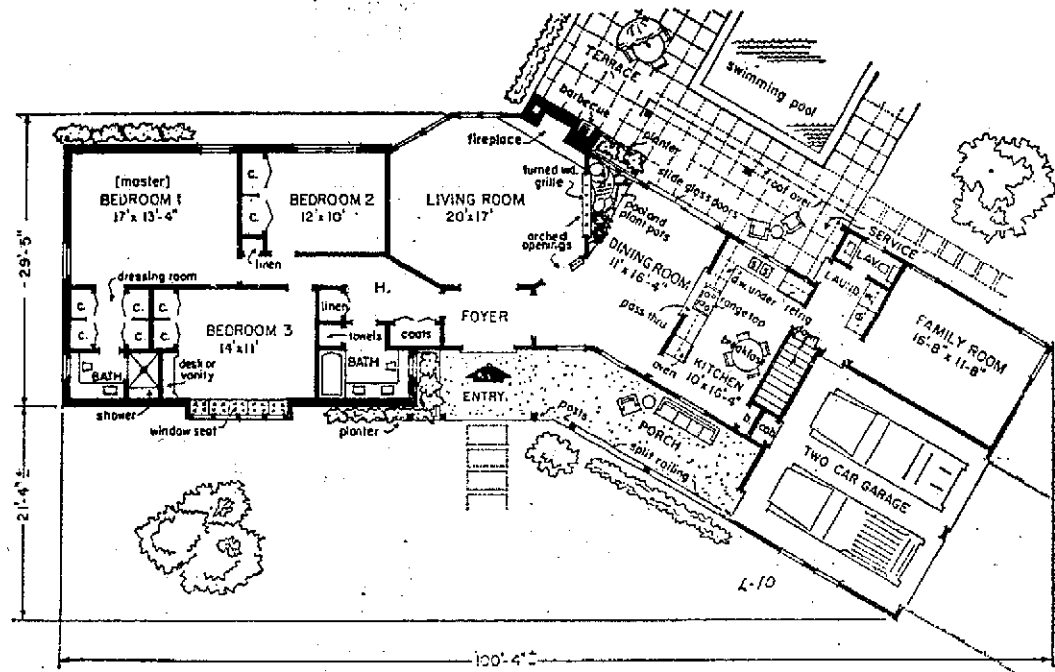

To maintain authenticity, typically Western exterior materials have been used, such as the roughcut stone, rough hewn timber posts and brackets, split rails, stucco (Mexican influence) and the often used boards-and-battens (for their simplicity in shaping, weather tightness and quick erection). The rough irregular wood shingles top off the structure perfectly. Two refinements are also added for the decor — the clay chimney pots and the horseshoe-covered door. Long-horned steer horns are used here for door pulls.

The front porch is a huge 32' long and complements the front entrance; double posts frame the opening. Inside, the large foyer introduces a visitor to exceptional living interest. A large octagonal living room lies to the rear with a two-sided window wall allowing a full view of the rear lawn. The adjoining wall is the stone fireplace containing a built-in outdoor barbecue. A fourth wall consists of a timber-framed opening with large Spanish-type turned poles providing decoration to both living and dining rooms. By looking through, one can view the pool terrace in the rear.

side of the framed opening. This shapes the room as well as providing a very decorative arrangement.

The kitchen is "L" shaped with a large breakfast area, a rear view of the pool terrace at the double sink and a front window overlooking the front porch. Front and rear exposure kitchens are not usually available but well appreciated by a homemaker, particularly when there are children in the family.

The service area is just beyond the kitchen with its laundry, lavatory rear entrance door, stair to basement, entrance to family room and entrance to garage. Note the effectiveness of this arrangement with a washup lavatory exactly where it is needed at the hub of service activities.

The bedroom wing is isolated for quiet and privacy. A large hall bath serves two of the three bedrooms as well as a powder room. A second but private bath serves the master bedroom. Double banks of closets at the entrance form a dressing area.

The front bedroom has a 10-foot window seat in the bay window as well as a built-in vanity or desk. Closets are abundant throughout and traffic circulation is excellent.

and a hog show following the 4-H hog show on Wednesday.

The fair ends with a purple ribbon winner parade Thursday evening and a formal program including the finals of the showmanship contests, presentation of awards and a dress review of the purple ribbon winners in home economics. Purple ribbon horses, beef and dairy cattle will also be paraded in the 4-H arena.

Bish said the buildings will be open to the public until 9 p.m. each day of the fair.

The Lancaster fair is held on the state fairgrounds in Lincoln.

The Lancaster County Fair will feature an open class beef show for the first time in many years according to Cyril Bish, county extension agent.

This will also be the first FFA show at a county fair in Lincoln with entries expected from at least four of the chapters in the county.

Livestock entries are expected to include 270 horses, 217 beef cattle, 175 swine, 150 lambs, 117 dairy cattle and 25 poultry and rabbit exhibitors.

There will be well over 1,000 exhibitors in the homemaking area with more than 3,000 entries, according to Bish.

The fair begins Monday with the horse judging at 6:30 p.m. including halter classes and showmanship.

Events on Tuesday include a dog show at 8:30 a.m., performance classes of horses 8:30 a.m., agricultural demonstrations at 10 a.m., Bicycle safety contest at 1 p.m., tree and weed identification contest at 2 p.m., and a gun safety contest at 4 p.m.

Scheduled for Wednesday are the 4-H clothing, home living, health and safety demonstrations from 8:30 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. There will be sheep and swine shows both starting at 8 a.m. and a dairy show at 2 p.m.

The 4-H Beef show will be held at 8 a.m. Wednesday with the public dress review at 9 a.m.

Open class events include a beef show at 1 p.m. Tuesday

Your Nurseryman Speaks Now Is Best Time To Seed Your Lawn

The best time of the year to establish a permanent lawn by seeding is here.

The soil should be prepared by roto-tilling, plowing or discing as soon as possible. If large clods remain, the area will need harrowing. A steel-tine rake is best for finish work and to touch up the final grade.

A good organic fertilizer should be spread as soon as the soil has been prepared. Then the seed itself should be applied between Aug. 25th and Sept. 15th.

Seed applied earlier than this can be hurt by the heat. Seed applied later than mid-September may be injured by an early winter and its attendant soil-heaving.

Slow Evaporation

The seeded area should be rolled with a lawn roller. This is particularly important if any degree of slope exists. An application of straw or peat moss slows evaporation and is very important if you don't have all the time you would like to sprinkle the newly seeded area.

And this brings us to the critical point in any successful lawn seeding program. It is vital that the seed remain moist from the time that it starts to germinate. If it dries out completely during this important time, it may die.

A homeowner can save a respectable amount of money by seeding his lawn rather than having sod laid. However, if he does not have time available to keep the seed moist during the germination period (two weeks to a month), he will be much better off to spend the additional money for sod.

New seed must be watered at least three times a day. Preferred times are 7 to 8 a.m.; noon to 1 p.m.; 6 to 7:30 p.m. If extremely hot and dry times should prevail, a fourth watering time in mid-afternoon will be needed.

Hand Sprinkling

Hand sprinkling is recommended in most cases. Use of most kinds of mechanical sprinklers will cause the seed to run to low spots in the lawn. There is one exception to this rule.

If great care is used, hose-type sprinklers that produce a fine mist can be used.

It should not be inferred from the above that new sod does not need conscientious watering. It does. But a sprinkler can be used and new sod does not require a rigid watering schedule like new seed does.

Failure to water new sod properly can cause bleaching and even death.

If you have a few spots in your lawn that have died through summer, you may find that a few rolls of sod will be much more satisfactory than a pound or so of seed for precisely the same reasons that are stated above.

Good luck regardless of whether you choose seed or sod. This is by far the best time of the year to get the job done.

Garden Gossip

Summer Is Time To Replant Iris

EMERY W. NELSON
County Extension Agent

Summer is the right time to divide and replant iris. By planting them now, bloom can be expected from the strong rhizomes next spring.

Under ordinary garden conditions, iris will need to be divided every three or four years. However, many gardeners like to keep the clumps small and will divide them every two years. If the iris are left undivided, the rhizomes become so crowded that bloom is produced only on the edge of the clump.

Simple Task

The process of dividing and transplanting the iris is a simple task. It involves digging the iris clump, removing the dirt and cutting the rhizomes into single fans. At this time, the leaves are reduced by cutting to a length of six-eight inches.

Only the healthy, strong rhizomes are saved for replanting as most iris are prolific producers of new ones. Diseased rhizomes should be saved only if they are treated.

Control of Rot

Iris should be planted in a well drained location and covered to one inch or less. If a group planting is desired, 3 to 5 rhizomes can be planted in a circle with the nose or pointed end toward the center. Often it is wise to select a spot that is several inches higher than surrounding soil for planting iris. This provides for better drainage.

The Odd Couple

Bruno — The Bruno Alpine Players will present Neil Simon's comedy "The Odd Couple" at the Fireman's Hall Aug. 19-22. This is the second summer production by the Players. Both have been directed by Brad Ford.

Night Club Resolution To Council

City Atty. Dick Wood has prepared a resolution — not yet released to the public — which will spell out the city's position vis-a-vis the citizen complaint against Spa, Inc. doing business as the Royal Grove, 340 West Cornhusker.

The resolution is expected to be presented at Monday's City Council meeting, at which time the Council will determine appropriate action.

In other action before the Council, a determination will be made as to the procedure for accumulating vacation time.

On another topic, the Council will hold a public hearing on amendments to the City Code dealing with driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and providing for chemical tests and penalties.

Yellow Grass? Even Though You Fertilize?

It's likely caused by iron deficiency. Our anemic soils are frequently responsible for the "yellows", even when the grass is fed regularly. And the color won't improve, no matter how much you fertilize, until the iron deficiency is corrected.

That's where Scotts new IRON-S comes in. It supplies the plant-available iron that is necessary for good green color. Iron-S is not a substitute for fertilizer. It is an iron supplement that, when used with fertilizer, helps yellowing grass turn green again. See for yourself . . . this weekend!

PROPER FEEDING HELPS

STOP NEW WEEDS

If weeds aren't a problem, you can help keep it that way by regular fertilizing with Scotts TURF BUILDER. It helps grass spread out and knit into good thick turf. Then new weeds have difficulty starting. They are crowded out by vigorous grass plants. Results?

A greener, thicker, more weed-free lawn.

THIS YEAR WHY LET WEEDS SPOIL YOUR LAWN?

Simply spread Scotts PLUS-2. It clears out dandelions, plantain, clover and many other ugly weeds from your lawn. PLUS-2 actually makes them shrivel and disappear, roots and all. The full feeding in PLUS-2 also makes your grass grow greener and sturdier. Makes it fill in where the weeds used to be!

Trade-In Special $6 Off Scotts Lawn Spreader

Bring in your old spreader . . . any make, model, or condition, and you can trade it in on a new Scotts Model 35 Spreader. Scotts Model 35 is ruggedly built to last for years, yet it's lightweight and easy to handle. Has Dial-A-Matic rate setting and fingertip on-off control. 18" spreading width, and rust-resistant finish. No spreader is too old or dilapidated to qualify for this trade-in offer, so if your old spreader is "over the hill" . . . trade it in today! Regularly 19.95 . . . with trade in:

Public Hearing Set on 40th-Normal Rezoning Bid

The City-County Planning Commission Wednesday will hold a public hearing on a request for a change of zone to business use on property at Southeast corner of 40th and Normal.

Advanced Products Inc., represented by Attorney David Tews, is requesting a change to G Local Business on the property presently zoned for A-2 Single Family use.

Brogden said there have not been any changes in the neighborhood since to warrant an approval recommendation. Brogden said he feels the proposal should be turned down.

Tews is also requesting an amendment to the zoning text to allow theaters in the G Local Business District. Brogden said he has no objection to the proposal which would also allow theaters in the G-1 district.

A similar application had been filed in fall of last year which was recommended for denial by the Planning Commission. A shopping center with an enclosed mall was Proposed at that time.

Theaters are allowed to operate in the H-1, H-2, I, II, and J business districts.

Under old business is a change of zone from B Two Family to D Multiple Dwelling on property at the northeast corner of 20th and Euclid, requested by L. H. Feerhusen.

New items scheduled for a public hearing —Change of zone, from G Local Business to I Commercial on property at northwest corner of 29th and O, requested by Robert Johnson.

—Change of zone, from B Two Family to D Multiple on property at 8th and C, requested by Paul Stoehr.

—Change of zone, from G Local Business to H-1 Highway Commercial on property at northeast corner of 45th and R, requested by Mowbray Buick, Inc.

—Special permit, to construct a parking lot at 42nd and N, requested by Midwest Plumbing and Heating Inc.

—Special permit, to amend community unit plan and preliminary plat of Southwood 2nd Addn., located west of 27th and south of Nebraska Hwy.

—Report, on photographers' home occupation use.

—Land purchase, southwest corner of 7th and J.

—Preliminary plat, Manke Estates, south side of L between 48th and 50th.

—Preliminary plat, Rockridge Acres, approximately 84th and Van Dorn.

GATEWAY REALTY OF FREMONT

Glenn Martindale, Owner and Manager of Gateway Realty of Fremont, Doris Martindale, Secretary and Roland Miller, Real Estate Salesman and Col. Ray Gottner, President, Lincoln Gateway Realty.

"Lincoln Gateway Realty" is pleased to introduce "Gateway Realty of Fremont". Located at 1841 No. Bell, Fremont, Nebraska, phone 402/721-5380. Formerly known as Farm and Home Realty. Gateway Realty of Fremont is a new addition to a growing series of locally owned and managed Gateway Realty offices throughout the state of Nebraska.

Gateway Realty of Fremont is a member of the Nebraska Real Estate Association.

The Gateway System is especially beneficial to Nebraskans moving from city to city within the state. People can list their home in one city, buy a new home in another city, all within the frame work of the same system. In addition, a family wishing to sell their home can take advantage of a state-wide referral system which will enable owners to sell their homes more readily.

Watch for future announcements as the Gateway System grows.

Currently ready to serve you are Gateway Realty of Grand Island, Gateway Realty of Columbus, Gateway Realty of Kearney, Gateway Realty of North Platte, Gateway Realty of Hastings, Gateway Realty of Fremont and Lincoln Gateway Realty.

SECTION G—AUGUST 15, 1971—PAGE 1

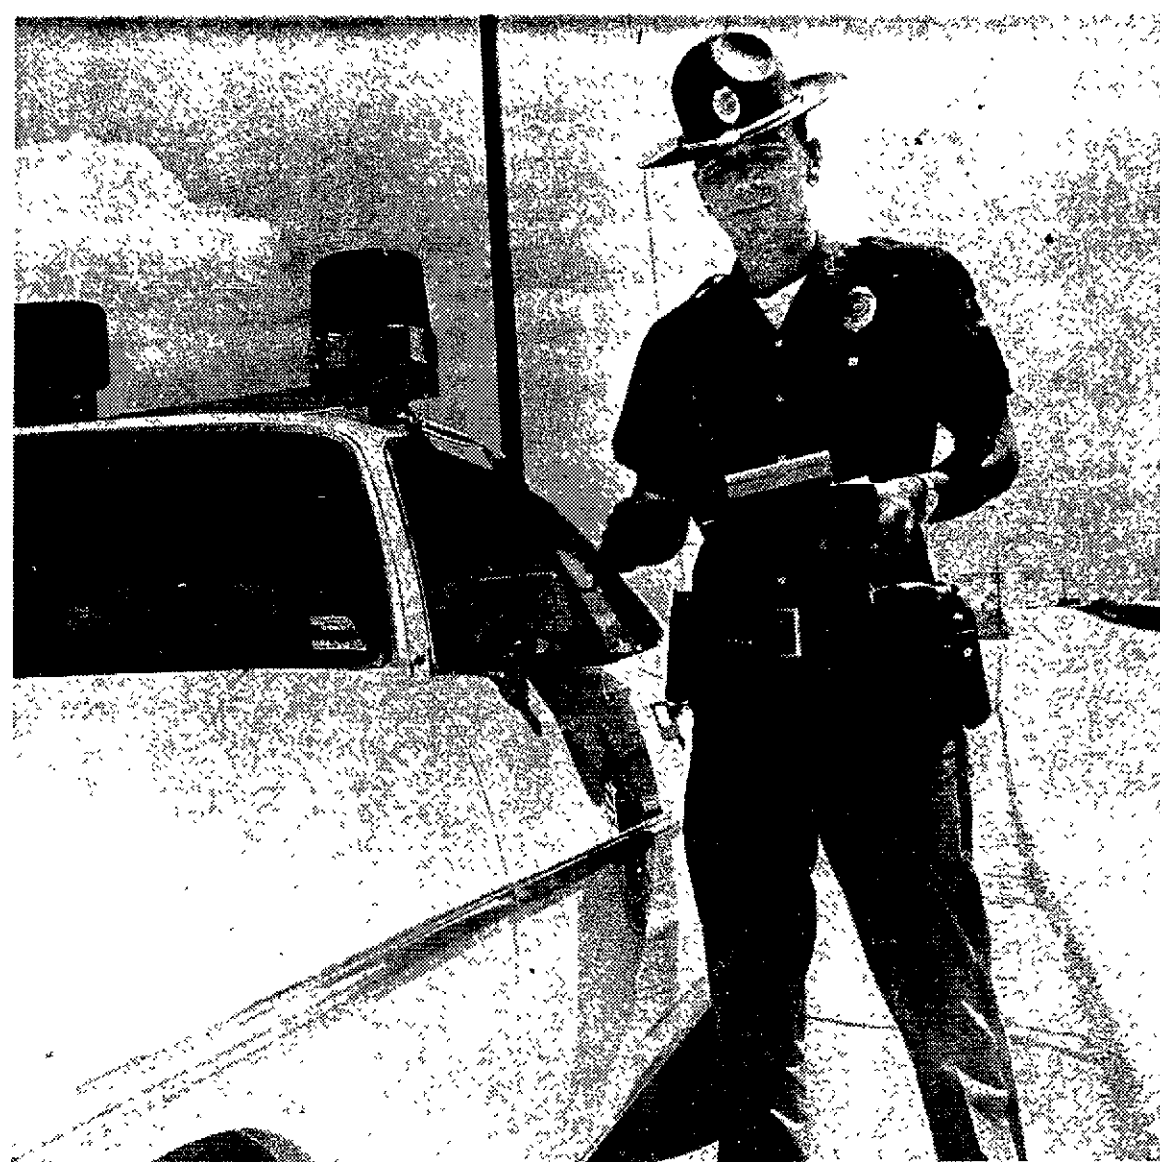

Contrary to the stereotype often seen in old movies on TV, good guys don't always wear white.

Many of the good guys — and gals — in uniform even wear shades of black but their deeds are far from villainous.

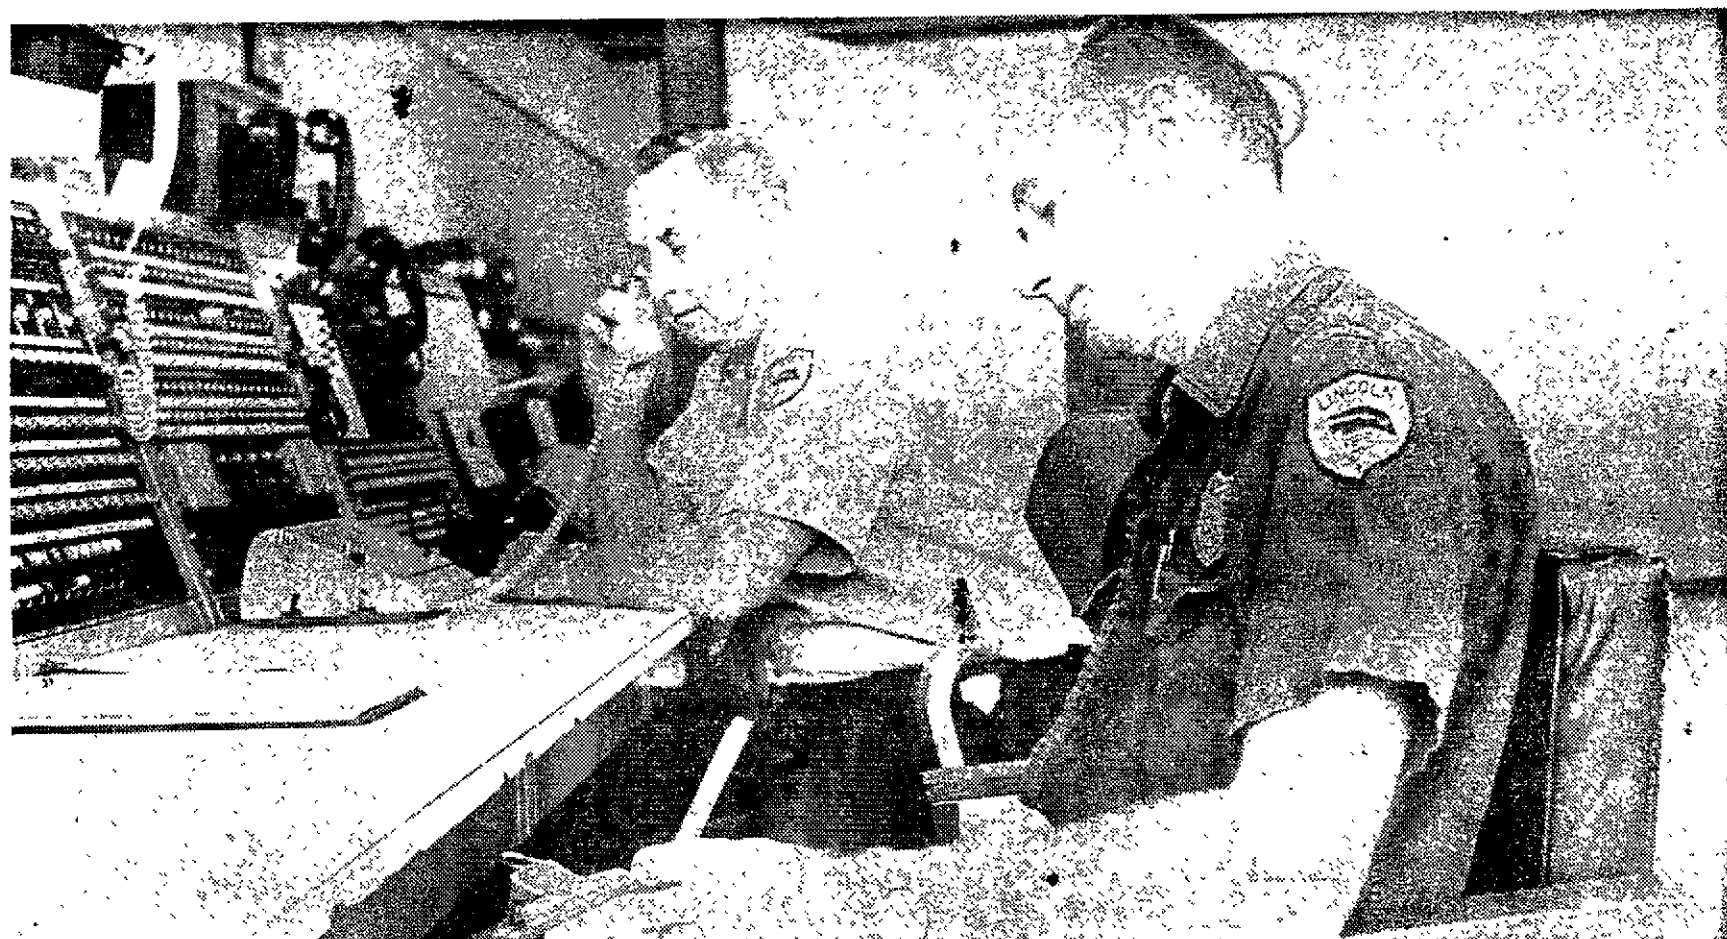

According to Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary, a uniform is a "dress of a distinctive design or fashion worn by members of a particular group and serving as a means of identification."

And a quick quiz directed at the preschooler down the street quickly shows what an effective means of identification a uniform is.

The crisply starched white nurse's cap, the black policeman's hat, a stewardess' wings, arm patches and other distinctive uniform characteristics all tell the observant citizen what that person's job is.

'Ritsurin Park in Japan' by Ron Psota of North Loup won first prize in color and still life division.

Former Peace Corpsman Takes Prize

Beat-Up, 'Something to Use' Camera Was Winner

He doesn't know what kind of camera he used, wasn't sure how to spell the name of the setting and isn't planning on keeping the $35 he won — but Ron Psota of North Loup took first prize in the Sunday Journal and Star photo contest's color scenes and still life division.

Ron Psota
Color Scenes Winner

Psota, 27, explained that the Minolta he usually uses was broken and the man in the Tokyo repair shop loaned him "a small beat-up 35mm something to use."

The former Peace Corpsman was on the return jog of a 2½-year stint in India and a three-month trip through the Far East when he took the winning photo of Ritsurin Park in Takamatsu on Shikoku Island in Japan.

He added that at the time he was too interested in the scenery in the 184-acre park—which took more than a year to build—to think about the spelling.

When he took the picture in March, he said, it was raining "and I had to lean all the way over to keep water off the lens."

He's planning on donating his $35-prize money to the Pakistani Relief Fund, because "they need it more than I do right now."

Psota said he really didn't get interested in photography until almost three years ago when he bought his "first good camera" in Singapore on his way to India.

"You know, the picture of the park," he concluded, "really isn't my favorite — I like the one I shot in India much more."

Daley, "Emerald Lake" by Lt. Col. A. Peshek (USAF Ret.) and "El Bote" by G. Lopez, all of Lincoln.

Today's picture is the first of four first-place winners to be announced in The Sunday Journal and Star Photo Contest. The other three first-place winners — one in color and two in black and white—will be published in FOCUS in subsequent weeks.

A Symphony of Sound, Motion

Union College to Host Gymnairs

Gymnairs for Christ, a team of 30 young men and women from Seventh-day Adventist campuses across the U.S. and Canada, will perform at the Union College Auditorium, 49th and Prescott, at 8 p.m. Aug. 25.

Called a symphony in sound, motion and color, the Gymnairs will demonstrate gymnastic feats using the parallel bars, trampoline, springboard and other equipment as well as presenting balancing acts, some of which will involve the entire team.

Part of the group's program includes a person-to-person conversation with other young people about Christ.

Coach for the Gymnairs is Bob Kalua, a Hawaiian who has been involved in gymnastics since he was 13, and who directed a team on the West Coast. Kalua is instructor in physical education at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich.

The tour, which will find the group in more than 50 cities this summer, is sponsored by the youth department of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in cooperation with its local conferences.

Renee Warnock of Ft. Morgan, Colo., is on the team. She is a sophomore at Union College.

'Talent Wasted in Tasteless Tale of Vengeance and Cruelty'

Some people may attach the adjective "obscene" to any motion picture which contains nudity or less than proper language.

I believe that the industry has come to the point where violence in today's product must be considered a more repulsive quality than either of the two aforementioned questionable aspects.

Frankly, bare the flesh and even utter a few four-letter words, but no more of this blood-letting like seen in The Hunting Party, next at the State, is appreciated.

Talent Wasted

It is a shame to waste such talents like Oliver Reed (Oliver and Women in Love) and Gene Hackman (I Never Sang for My Father) on such a useless and tasteless tale of vengeance and cruelty. Even the female lead . . . Candice Bergen (who is showing more promise as her career forges ahead) . . . should not be associated with such a display of exploding heads and ripping away of bodies.

Miss Bergen is mistakenly kidnapped by a gang of outlaws (outlaw leader Reed thinks she is a teacher who can teach him to read and write). Her husband (Hackman), out on a hunting trip with a group of millionaire cronies, decides to try out his long-range, high-powered rifles on the outlaws instead of the planned buffalo when he hears of his wife's disappearance. Actually it turns out that wifey prefers Reed's soft bedside manner to that of brutal and sadistic hubby.

This film leaves nothing to the imagination. When a cowpoke is killed at close range with a shotgun, we are treated to a view within spitting range. Alas the times when men were shot and killed in bloodless manner in the movies are gone. This reviewer believes in honesty, but this blood-bath scene is one that I can do nicely without, thank you Hollywood.

Not only do we see one or two fellows killed here and there, but Hackman takes us through the picking off of each member of the outlaw gang, who we actually develop an empathy for. When all comes to an end, Hackman sets off across the desert pursuing the remaining couple.

Shoot-Out

When the shoot-out comes, Hackman blasts so many holes in Reed that he looks like a human-sized sponge. Hubby also does Miss Bergen in right in the stomach.

Even though Hackman "gets his" by dying of thirst after doing the final dastardly deed, it doesn't really make any difference. One wishes he had never seen this film. In fact, you begin to wish some hateful act on the director.

But the director must just be following the lead. What is to come in the film houses in the next few months also reeks of blood and guts. Whether it is a mood of the times or a genuine interest in seeing people get killed is debatable.

The Hunting Party is not entertaining and not even terribly ingenious in script. That's certainly reason enough to stay home. If you get as far as the theater door, go across the street and have a few beers instead. (R)

This scenic view is the Niobrara River east of Valentine. The area is involved in a growing controversy over whether the O'Neill Unit project should be built. The project calls for construction of a dam (Norden) and reservoir which would create a lake 19 miles long in Brown, Keya Paha and Cherry counties. Environmental groups oppose the project. It has support from local groups and some state agencies.

Old NEBRASKA

1871: The cornerstone of the new addition to the Academy of Music building was laid.

90 1881: The annual convention and picnic of the German Singing Society of Nebraska was held at Cushman Park in Lincoln.

80 1891: An ordinance permitting property owners to build sidewalks where they pleased was killed by the City Council.

70 1901: The Chicago News published a story claiming that William Jennings Bryan planned to move from Lincoln to Chicago, where he was to become a candidate for mayor of Chicago. Bryan was in Wyoming at the time, but his friends denied the rumor.

60 1911: A careful analysis revealed that Lincoln's water was "remarkably free from typhoid bacteria," although the fever was quite prevalent in the city.

50 1921: Members of the Burlington Railroad brotherhoods were preparing for a strike.

40 1931: Sen. George W. Norris said government appropriations, other than private contributions, must be made to give relief to the unemployed. "Appropriations must be made all along the line," he said, "from the municipality and the county to the federal government."

30 1941: Wartime absorption of unemployment was responsible for the steady decline in Nebraska's penal population, state officials said. The total reformatory population was 940—140 less than two years earlier.

20 1951: Bus tokens could no longer be used as fare on Lincoln city buses. Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin was the featured speaker at the 5th annual Marine Corps League convention in Lincoln.

10 1961: Vandals caused thousands of dollars damage to 35 Lincoln cars by spraying red enamel on them.

Last Week The University of Nebraska Board of Regents removed Dr. Kirk Naylor as president of the University of Nebraska at Omaha. Dr. John V. Blackwell, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at UNO, was named temporary president. Naylor will stay at UNO as a professor of education.

A tent city was erected on a vacant lot at 22nd and Vine Sts. The project was organized to dramatize the housing problems of low-income families. More than 100 persons moved into the tents.

Jimmy Dean: Luckiest Cuss Ever to Breathe

Plainview, Tex. (UPI) — Folksy singer Jimmy Dean says he is "the most fortunate cuss God ever put breath in."

Dean, 42, lives in suburban New Jersey from which he oversees his budding empire. He frequently returns to Plainview, his hometown in the Texas panhandle, where he has a joint business venture with his only brother, Don, and where he visits his mother.

Dean remembers when he pulled cotton, milked cows, cleaned chicken houses — just about anything to make a dollar. And, he remembers the hours his mother spent over an ironing board to help meet expenses.

"When you were raised as poor as I was you didn't know how to dream of big things," drawled the 6-foot-3 Texan. "I didn't know how to dream in dollars — much less in millions of dollars I dreamed in dimes, nickels and pennies — that was my dream."

Bird-Watching Is Sport That All Can Enjoy

By FRANCES LOUISE
Special Writer

Bird-watching can be fascinating where there is such a variety as is found in Lincoln. An enthusiast can reasonably expect to find two dozen species not far from his door. Twice that number of seasonal residents can be seen without leaving the city limits.

The easiest place to watch birds, of course, is your own yard. If there is a park nearby, you might try it. Or take a leisurely walk through the neighborhood and observe your neighbors' birds. Don't neglect to search the branches above the sidewalk; you may find a robin or turtle dove nest there.

If you still haven't found two dozen different kinds of birds, visit the nearest vacant lot, strip of railroad right-of-way, or corner of wasteland. If there are a few trees, especially young ones, with much undergrowth and some water, you may find almost any species.

Favorite Food

Dead timber attracts woodpeckers and wrens. Plums and mulberries attract a number of different birds, some for the fruit and some for the nesting sites they provide.

Artists' Guild To Hold Annual Sidewalk Show

Lincoln Artists' Guild will have its annual Sidewalk Show at Gateway this week.

Hours Thursday and Friday are 9 a.m.-9 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

On exhibition will be work of members of the guild and there also will be craft and art demonstrations by artists during the show.

For Children

NBC has scheduled the second half-hour special based on the children's tales of the late French writer-artist, Jean de Bruhoff. Babar Comes to America, set for Sept. 7, deals with the author's delightful elephant character. The animated musical will have narration by Peter Ustinov, who also provides the voices for the various animals, two services he performed for the first such program, Babar the Elephant, in 1968.

Chinese elm and box elder saplings are favored as nest sites for yellow warblers and goldfinches, and thistle seeds provide goldfinches with their favorite food. Cattails and marshy places attract redwing blackbirds and Maryland yellowthroats.

If there is much uncut grass or weeds, but no trees, you may find dickcissels, meadowlarks, juncos and various species of sparrows, depending on the season.

Downtown, you can enjoy watching the small black chimney swifts and the larger white-wing barred nighthawks scooping up flying insects above the rooftops on a summer evening. Their presence is signalled by a piercing "beep beep" as a nighthawk makes his mighty sweep, or by an intermittent twittering as a swift flutters by on his strong little wings, seeming to have no tail at all.

Only Two Kinds

Perhaps you are one of those people who can recognize only two kinds of birds — pigeons and sparrows. If so, you will find a whole new world opening up to you when you begin to notice some of the different colors of the "sparrows" in Lincoln. The "pigeons" also have a wide variety of colors and easily recognized differences in body shapes.

Then, too, many common birds are much more readily heard than seen. The house wren, for instance, is just a tiny brown "sparrow" that likes to tilt its tail straight up, but its voice, whether singing or scolding intruders, has such volume and force you'd think it came from a creature twice its size.

Among the "pigeons," even the brilliant red cardinal and the flashy orange-and-black Baltimore oriole can defy you to see them if they are perched among the green leaves whistling away, but their songs are unmistakable.

You may find the cardinal's whistle similar to that with which you call your dog but if the song begins like a full-throated roundelay that never seems to be finished, it is probably an oriole.

Very Quietly

As you learn to know a particular bird very well, you'll discover that the species — and sometimes the individual within a species — has its own characteristic manner of behavior.

For example, most birds leave their nests very quietly and some use an elaborate route for coming and going. But the turtle dove becomes air-borne with a "whirr" that easily betrays the nest site.

A cuckoo, on the other hand, leaves his nest with a noiseless falling motion such that it is possible to watch it leave and still not be able to tell which way it went — a disappearing act worthy of Houdini.

Bird-watching is a sport anyone can enjoy. All it takes to become quite proficient is a good book or two and some bird-song recordings, all of which can be borrowed from the Bennett Martin Library in Lincoln.

Any book by Roger Tory Peterson can be recommended. His How to Know the Birds is a small volume that should be in the hands of every serious beginner.

As for binoculars, they're nice but you can easily find two dozen species of birds in Lincoln without spending a penny.

Youth Faith Festival at Omaha Next Sunday

Three Nebraska youths are organizing a youth faith festival to be held at Elmwood Park in Omaha next Sunday at 7 p.m.

The whole purpose of the festival, to be called "The World With Jesus," is to spread the message of Christ, according to Susie Filbert, 1237 Peach, one of the sponsors along with Jack Gillam, 2321 Dorothy Drive, and Dave Larson, Omaha. The students got the idea for the festival while attending St. John's College in Winfield, Kan., last year.

Two musical groups from Lincoln, the Turning Point, a band; and New Life Singers, a singing group; will present music directed at spiritual growth, Miss Filbert said. Plans are under way to solicit other groups from Omaha for the performance.

Larry D. Branum, 32, a landscape contractor in Lincoln, will tell his life story and subsequent acceptance of Jesus last December. Branum used to live in California where he was a gang leader and filled with hate, Miss Filbert said. She added that Branum said his only security was a switchblade knife, until he accepted Jesus and found real happiness in life.

Members of the audience who wish to witness for Christ will be invited on stage to participate in the youth faith festival.

Free transportation will be available for 100 people from Lincoln. Interested parties should make seat reservations with Miss Filbert.

Bobby Sherman: The Kids Really Love Him

By NORMAN MARK
(c) Chicago Daily News

We're driving into the Screen Gems Ranch in Hollywood and already I'm getting nervous. What does one ask Bobby Sherman, love god of contemporary teen-age girls? A wrong question, a missed opportunity and 50 million 13-year-old girls could tear me limb from limb.

We travel down make-believe streets that look like western towns, American cities at the turn of the century, old New York, or modern suburbia, and finally we park next to a sound stage. Beside our station wagon, there is the hearse that will be driven by Bobby in his new TV series, to be seen on Saturday evenings this fall on ABC. Next to the hearse is the gaily colored Partridge Family bus.

This means that David Cassidy's ABC series is filmed cheek-to-jowl with Sherman's. Just think David and Bobby are friends. They occupy the Olympian heights of teen popularity these days, and they alone should dissolve the average teen into a puddle of warm coke.

Now we're inside the studio.

The series is about Bobby Sherman and his buddy, Wes Stern, who live in Los Angeles and try to become song writers. They sleep in an antique store, they are friendly with landlady Pat Carroll and policeman Jack Burns, and they are the legal guardians for Bobby's 12-year old sister, Susan Neher (who was John Forsythe's middle daughter in To Rome With Love before it was cancelled).

Set Cramped

The set is a cramped affair, jumbled with pinball machines, cuckoo clocks, beer mugs, Persian rugs, a cash register, candelabra, old radios, ancient refrigerators, a roll-top desk, a wooden slat saying "What's Home Without a Mother?" and a 12-year-old girl in green satin hotpants.

They're filming the story of Susan's first date (at 12?) and Bobby, her brother, is worried. Finally he agrees to let her go on the date. Cut. Print it. Interview time.

Bobby and a group of reporters sit behind that set, Bobby relaxing in a prop wicker wheel chair.

Ok, I fall back on past experience, and get immediately to the gut issues.

Bobby, who do you date and how do you kiss?

"I date a lot of people," he said, not even thinking twice about the impertinence of it all. "It's hard to justify a relationship with one person, one steady, with my schedule. Basically I date friends, people friends introduce me to, and, sometimes, fans."

Letters Answered

"If fans want to send me letters, write to me at, ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, ABC-TV, New York. I get between 15,000 and 17,000 letters a week. Every letter gets answered, but it may not be a personal answer."

This fantastic popularity began rather inconspicuously for Sherman a few years ago when he sang at a Fourth of July party at Sal Mineo's home and, because of that, cut a few records. Later he appeared on the short-lived teen-oriented TV series, Shindig, going on to two seasons as one of the young brothers in a western logging camp in ABC's Here Come the Bobby Sherman . . . ABC is betting on him.

Brides. It wasn't a heavy dramatic role for him, but he looked good in blue jeans and opennecked lumberjack shirts, and when the network canceled the series in 1970, girls picketed for the return of Bobby Sherman.

Meanwhile, he was busy making singles and albums that became gold records almost as soon as they were released. His hits have included "Hey, Little Woman," "Julie, Do Ya Love Me?" and "Cried Like a Baby," all songs in which Bobby sings about his search for the one right girl for him.

His concerts are frantic affairs, with thousands of girls from the bubblegum brigade turning out to scream and cry when he comes on stage and flashes his familiar v-sign at them.

Bobby Sherman is a star for the pre-teens because he doesn't seem sexually threatening to them.

When we watched Elvis Presley or Tom Jones, we knew we were seeing rock-star studs.

But Bobby (and his buddy, David) are the gentler, unisexual, amost mousey, sort of teen idols. Parents see them as essentially harmless sorts, nice boys who might live next door and take their daughters to church socials.

Chips on Bobby

ABC is betting its entire Saturday night schedule on Sherman, a 140-pound chap who is unknown to most people older than 22½. If My Three Sons on CBS clobbers Bobby, the other ABC-TV Saturday night shows may suffer. This includes 22 new Saturday night, made-for-TV movies at about $500,000 apiece and Tony Curtis' new series, The Persuaders.

Bobby will either be a wildly popular, shortlived hit similar to the Monkees and Batman or a fast flop. The teens are a fickle audience.

"God bless the kids, they've been so good to me," Bobby says, and he means it. There isn't an evil bone in his body, or at least there isn't one apparent to newspaper reporters.

"The people around me are fine, I enjoy talking to people, the press is fine, I can't complain, it's a pleasure to be in the business, I've been very fortunate," etc.

He shows us a ring fashioned out of an antique spoon and given to him by a girl he once met in Chicago's Old Town. He talks about wanting to become a film director and how he outfitted a truck with 16-mm. equipment so that he can experiment with film.

Lots of Sleep

The conversation is interrupted for a close-up of Bobby on set. A girl materializes and combs his hair, just so. The director says, "Just sit into it, Bobby. And action." Bobby grimaces one way, then another looks surprised. Cut. Back to the interview.

"My lifestyle is not to be desired," Bobby says. "One thing, my body requires sleep. Weekdays, I get up at 6 a.m., finish filming at 7:30 p.m., read tomorrow's script, shower and go to bed. Saturdays and Sundays, I make personal appearances and I need almost eight hours sleep every night."

"I try to take the time necessary to give the kids as much of myself as I can. I do not disguise myself when I go out. I don't sneak around and neither do I go into a store and say, 'I'll bet you're wondering who I am.' But, when buying a loaf of bread, which might take 40 minutes normally, I have to allow more than an hour, so I can sign autographs."

Begins 17th Season

Gunsmoke, television's long-running western drama series, returns for its 17th season this fall on CBS with powerful stories and outstanding guest stars.

James Arness continues his starring role as U.S. Marshal Matt Dillon. Also returning are regulars Milburn Stone as Doc Adams, Amanda Blake as Kitty Russell, Ken Curtis as Festus Haggen, Buck Taylor as Newly O'Brien and Glenn Strange as Sam, bartender at the Long Branch.

Noted Broadway and Hollywood actor Pat Hingle will fill in for Milburn Stone in several episodes already filmed for the new season, appearing as Dr. John Chapman. Stone, who was convalescing from heart surgery when Gunsmoke began filming for 1971-72, is expected to return to the show when production, now in hiatus, resumes later in the year.

Among the guest stars scheduled to appear on Gunsmoke this season are Richard Kiley, Kim Hunter, Buddy Ebsen, Johnnie Whitaker and Ruth Roman.

Lucy Begins 4th Season

Here's Lucy, starring Lucille Ball, who begins her 21st year as a CBS star this fall, will open its fourth season on the network with comedian Flip Wilson as guest star on the premiere broadcast. The series will be seen a half-hour later than its previous broadcast time.

Wilson will be the first of an impressive array of guest celebrities to be seen during the season. Among others on this roster are Helen Hayes, Mike Connors, star of the Mannix series, Ginger Rogers, Dinah Shore, Tony Randall, Rich Little, Dan Dailey, David Frost, Kaye Ballard and Allen Funt.

Continuing with Lucy in the show's cast will be Gale Gordon and Lucy's daughter, Lucie Arnaz. Desi Arnaz Jr., a regular in the past, will not appear in the regular cast for the new season.

Actors Direct

Hollywood — "In most pictures I've directed myself," Marlon Bando once said. "So why shouldn't I direct the entire picture?"

He did so, directing and starring in One-Eyed Jacks, a creditable 1961 western, but one which lost money for Paramount. He hasn't directed a film since.

Common Urge

The urge that struck Brando is common among stars. In recent times more and more of them have been turning to direction. Some, like Brando, are partly motivated by the desire to practice their profession without the interference of a director.

Others, like Paul Newman and Jack Lemmon, see film direction as a creative experience. The first directorial jobs of both were movies in which they did not appear — Newman with "Rachael, Rachael," starring his wife, Joanne Woodward; Lemmon with "Kotch," starring Walter Matthau.

"If I ever directed," says one star, "it would be a film in which I didn't appear. Your performance has to suffer when you're directing yourself. The only ones who have been able to direct their own pictures successfully have been Charlie Chaplin and Orson Wells — and even Wells has suffered from his own direction."

Others, like Woody Allen and John Cassavetes, claim that their performances aren't hindered by their double duties. In fact, they indicate they are able to maintain greater control.

Directors

Among the recent converts to film direction:

Sidney Poitier, who replaced Joe Sargent after a difference of opinion on Buck and the Preacher.

Clint Eastwood, who starred in and directed Play Misty for Me.

Elaine May, who ended up suing Paramount because of the way her A New Leaf was edited.

Cliff Robertson, who directed and starred in J. W.

Jack Nicholson, who directed Elliott Gould in Little Murders.

Jack Nicholson, who directed but did not appear in Drive, He Said."

Peter Fonda, who directed himself in The Hire Man.

Paul Newman directed himself for the first time in "Sometimes a Great Notion." He didn't plan it that way. He took over for another director who was fired after the film had begun.

Burt Lancaster has announced that he will direct his next film, Midnight Lady and the Mourning Man. It's a long time between directorial jobs for him; his last was The Kentuckian in 1955.

Monetary Loss

Ray Milland is another returnee to direction; he'll do K-3 at his old studio, Paramount. Once he explained his dilemma: "I hate acting. But the trouble is that it pays too damned well. I would much rather be a director, but the studios don't pay directors enough, even those who are more important than the actors. As a director I make one-fifth of my acting salary."

Rural-to-Urban Migration Studied Nebraskans Will Appear On Aug. 27 Documentary

Nebraska will come under national scrutiny this month as NBC focuses its cameras on rural-to-urban migration — a phenomenon of recent years which has been called the greatest movement of human beings in history—and the plight of the rural inhabitant in today's America.

In preparation for a documentary to be broadcast Aug. 27, network officials and researchers visited Nebraska for several weeks this spring, consulting various farm and small town residents, state officials and University professors in an effort to answer some of the serious questions raised in connection with rural-to-urban migration.

"Leaving home Blue An NBC News White Paper on Rural Migration" will examine some of the underlying reasons why, in the last three decades, some 25 million people have left the nation's farms and rural small-towns for urban life.

Chicano Farmer

According to Martha Hamilton, an NBC research worker who coordinated the fact-finding in Nebraska, the program will emphasize the repercussions of low income, high costs and job scarcity—dilemmas which now face both the farm worker and the small town businessman.

The show will also direct its attention to Texas and North Carolina to explore the situation of the Chicano farmer or migrant worker and the small black farmer.

Although the network is still in the process of editing the production, Mrs. Hamilton says she believes it may concern itself particularly with Nebraska's young people, and why so many of these individuals find it necessary to leave the farm or even their state to make a living.

Bennet farmer and documentary interviewee Joy Hyslop may provide insight — "Why should they eke out an existence," he asks, "when they can move to the city and get minimum wages?"

Young people are almost forced to move to the city because that is where the only available work is, he explains adding that high land and machine costs make it nearly impossible for a young person to start farming unless he inherits or obtains parental financial support.

Farmers 'Squeezed'

Farmers are being "squeezed" he asserts, by property taxes, low returns on investments, repair costs and inflation. Many small farmers and their wives are presently "moonlighting" at other jobs in local towns or cities to elevate their income to an adequate level, Hyslop said. "I'm very much afraid the family farm is a thing of the past — I just don't know where it can go from here."

Probing for insights and answers to these problems, NBC taped several discussions with Dr. Bert Evans, University of Nebraska Lincoln assistant professor of agricultural economics and Extension economist.

Evans believes "chronic low income" to be the most pervasive symptom of the rural malady, although he says farm ills are more than simply a matter of low incomes. The farm problem is a more fundamental one of low returns, he points out.

Farm programs have been "misdirected" he contends. "When we speak of farm policy, we need to concern ourselves not only with 'products,' but 'people's opportunities' as well. The more long run solution therefore, lies not merely in the manipulation of farm prices, but essentially in America's ability to bring about a national policy that gives better community services and educational opportunities to rural inhabitants."

In addition to creating a very unbalanced community life, the mass exodus from the country's rural sectors is having other painful side effects on the nation, according to the NU economist. "This rapid rate of change has implications on us all," he explains. "The influx of poor and untrained people into the urban centers causes obvious employment problems and eventually results in higher living costs."

Berkeley City Council Is Best Show in Town

By BOB ROSE
(C) Chicago Daily News

Berkeley, Calif. — Not in many cities do the residents, staid burghers and hippies alike, flock to their city council meetings for an evening's entertainment — an evening that could last up to 10 hours.

They do in Berkeley. By the hundreds.

Every Tuesday night the council meeting is the best show in town.

It may not be good government, but it's great theater.

The Berkeley council used to be dull, just like everybody else's. That all changed when three self-described radicals were elected to the nine-member council. An ally already on the council was elected mayor.

Voting Split

So that left a vacancy and a 4-4 voting split.

Since then the council has been unable to agree on appointment of a ninth member. It has failed to adopt a budget, even though the deadline was last June 30. It has not adopted a major piece of legislation, unless you want to make it that resolution telling police they can let their hair grow.

And the shaky leftist alliance is fighting among themselves.

The radical bloc includes Mayor Warren Widener, 32, a black attorney, councilman Ira Simmons, 28, ditto, councilman D'Army Bailey, 29, also ditto, and Ilona Hancock, 30, the white wife of a university faculty member. A fifth radical candidate, Rick Brown 29, a graduate student, was beaten out by only 23 votes.

The election was put over by a coalition of blacks, students and "street people." But that's about as far as the agreement lasted.

Simmons and Bailey have consistently stuck together. Mayor Widener was fought with them from time to time. And Mrs. Hancock, a woman's lib advocate, has turned on them all.

600 Attended

At the first meetings as many as 600 crowded the meeting room to cheer or harass their favorites. Scores of others pounded on the doors trying to get in.

Fire marshalls moved in and now allow only 230 bodies in the small room. After that point, even public officials invited to address the council can't get in. Nor can newsmen.

The underground Berkeley Barb and the conservative Berkeley Gazette joined the AP, the San Francisco Examiner and Chronicle, the Oakland Tribune and Time Magazine protesting that this is "illegal secrecy" in violation of state law. The protest was ignored.

The coalition tried to get loser Rick Brown appointed to the vacant seat. The noisy audience cheered his supporters, shouted down his opponents. The motion failed 4-4.

A woman suggested someone should be appointed able to communicate with all segments.

"Huey Newton is out of town," was one shout. "Chairman Mao won't accept," was another. When a man suggested a man be picked who "can stand tall and salute his flag," a large section stood up and gave him the Nazi salute. After the vote, there were shouts of "long hot summer" and "watch out from behind, you Fascists."

Another Woman

Councilwoman Hancock later complained her fellows were only discussing men candidates. She made a motion that the council recognize the need for another woman member. The motion passed 6-2, with her usual allies, Bailey and Simmons voting against her. She then moved that the council consider only woman candidates. That failed 6-2.

The council has gotten any farther on its $23.8 million budget, as proposed by city manager William C. Hanley, a man the radicals have vowed to remove from office. But they can't without six votes and Hanley refuses to take the hint.

Widener blew up when Hanley criticized him for being out of town on the anniversary of the people's park riot. Demonstrators battled police again. Forty-four were arrested and seven officers and one demonstrator were hurt. Widener said he didn't think he could have helped.

It's the responsibility of the mayor to be here so he can participate in decision making and see things are being handled correctly," snapped Hanley.

Widener clashed with the Bailey-Simmons duo when he gavelled down discussion by them he said had already been heard.

The two, who led an unsuccessful drive to have the police force chopped into several independent divisions, submitted their own budget, which would cut $700,000 from police funds and eliminate the juvenile, animal and 105-man reserve divisions.

Health Clinics

It also proposed taking a $200,000 emergency fund away from the city manager, dropping a $23,000 subsidy of the Chamber of Commerce, providing $25,000 for a study of "municipalizing" gas and electric company operations in the city, and $77,000 to set up three health clinics — one on campus and one in the black area, named after Black Panther Bobby Seale. It also suggested $600,000 more for child care facilities, as yet undefined, for a drug rehabilitation program and a senior citizens' center.

The group has not figured out where the money come from. They voted down a proposal by Mrs. Hancock for a "pollution tax."

'Arnie' Joins Comedy Lineup

Arnie Nuvo, CBS's instant executive, and his family will be moving in mid-September. To the blonde actress who plays his wife in the situation comedy, it is almost like starting a new series.

Sue Ane Langdon-Lillian Nuvo in the story of Arnie, the blue collar guy turned gray flannel—says that during the comedy's second season the writers on order are making it "a really sharp show."

The change, if it is pulled off, will be tailored to the new time period. It leaves its present snug harbor, ahead of the Mary Tyler Moore on Saturday nights, for a new mooring on Monday in the middle of a potent comedy lineup—Here's Lucy and The Doris Day Show ahead, and All In The Family behind.

Audience studies repeatedly show that Saturday evening audiences are what TV researchers call "bimodal" — mostly younger and older viewers who are believed to like their comedy broad and to enjoy warm sentimental family relationships. The more sophisticated ships.

Historic Preservation Stamps Unveiled

Designs of four Historic Preservation commemorative postage stamps were unveiled recently at four sites — Washington, D.C., San Francisco, Tucson, and Mystic, Conn. — whose unique architectural and engineering treasures are portrayed on the stamps.

The jumbo-size 8c stamps will be issued Oct. 29 at San Diego during the annual conference there of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Mrs. Winton M. Blount, wife of the postmaster general, did the Washington unveiling honors at Decatur House, which is one subject of the stamps.

This mansion, built by Commodore Stephen Decatur in 1819, is the oldest edifice on Lafayette Square, which faces the White House. Through the years it has been occupied by statesmen, diplomats and military leaders. Currently it is a house museum, a portion of which is headquarters for the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

In Mystic, where another stamp subject, the Charles W. Morgan whaling ship rides, Dr. F. G. Walton Smith of the University of Miami, conducted the unveiling, which was sponsored by the Marine Historical Association, Inc., of Mystic. The Morgan, also a historic landmark, is the last of the 19th Century whalers.

In Tucson, J. Edwin Kerr, of the Postal Service's western regional office, unveiled the designs, one of which is the San Xavier del Bac Mission, consecrated in 1797 and regarded as the finest surviving colonial mission in the United States.

In San Francisco, Postmaster Lim P. Lee unveiled the designs which included a cable car, a form of transportation that delights resident and tourist alike. These cable cars first operated in 1873, and at peak capacity covered 112 miles. Routes have shrunk to 10 miles. The ceremony was held in the cablehouse, where is housed the machinery that motivates the cars.

First day cancellation requests may be addressed to "Historic Preservation Stamps, Postmaster, San Diego, California 92101," enclosing proper remittance, which is 8 cents for each stamp desired.

Requests for specific stamps will be honored. Because the stamps are jumbo size, collectors desiring blocks of four are reminded to address their envelopes for cancellation as low and as far to the left as possible.

Northwest Rock Show Scheduled At Crawford

Crawford — The Northwest Rock Club's 10th annual rock show will be at the City Park pavilion here Aug. 21-22.

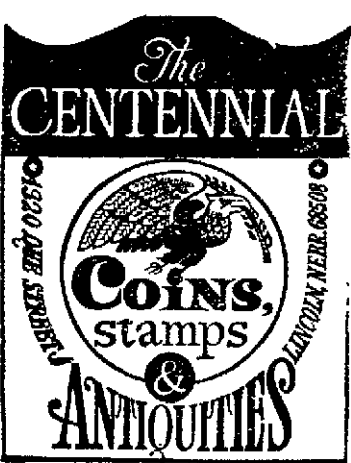

Show chairman, Earl McGuire, announced the show will again feature Don Meyer, Kimball, who will demonstrate glass blowing. A display of Herkimer diamonds from New York State is expected.

There will be a large number of displays, featuring local collections and exhibits of gems from all over the world.

Dealers from Idaho, Minnesota and Texas have been invited and will present special displays. The dealers will give demonstrations and answer questions concerning cutting and polishing of rocks.

Sing Theme

The entertainment theme of the Miss America Pageant, which NBC will telecast Sept. 11, is "How This Land Can Sing," presented through an original musical score by the husband-wife team of Glenn and Edna Osser. Four singer-dancer principals will perform the score.

You Can't Be Turned Down For This Insurance If You're 55 to 87!

Here is a life insurance plan that can be yours for the asking if you inquire before August 31, 1971. No ifs, ands, or buts! Not only is no physical examination required, but the policy is actually issued to you without even a single health question!

LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS*

... is the first life insurance program that guarantees acceptance to everyone who qualifies by age. This remarkable program of life insurance is guaranteed to every man and woman between 55 and 87—regardless of health, regardless of any other insurance carried.

So outstanding is the protection provided by LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS that it is recommended to their members by America's two most respected national nonprofit organizations for the mature: The National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA) and The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP). This plan is underwritten by Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, specialists in serving the specific needs of America's older population.

A Protection Breakthrough for Every Older Person!

LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS is an entirely new concept in life insurance, achieved as a result of the many years Colonial Penn has devoted to seeking an ideal fulfillment for the insurance needs of mature people.

The goal was a life insurance policy we could make available to all mature people—a policy whose cost would be low and whose benefits would be high. With LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS the Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company has succeeded. This policy is available only because of the reduced benefits during the two or three year preliminary benefit period, and after this period the plan provides full, permanent coverage.

LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS enables the healthy older person to obtain maximum benefits for his insurance dollar—and, at the same time, guarantees acceptance for all applicants—even those who ordinarily wouldn't qualify for life insurance.

The cost? JUST $6.95 A MONTH!

No matter what your age, your sex, or the condition of your health, you pay just $6.95 a month. The amount of coverage you receive is based on your sex and age. However, once you are insured, the amount of your insurance will never go down, and your payments will never go up!

Act Now—You Have Nothing to Lose!

To obtain full information on LIFE PLAN 55 PLUS in time to take advantage of this opportunity to become insured, please mail the coupon today.

No salesman, broker or agent will call, and you will be under no obligation whatsoever.

The Rock Scene Changeth Stones Planning Solo Albums

By JOHN J. MEEHAN
London (UPI)—Once upon a time there were "the" Beatles, and "the" Rolling Stones. The two groups dominated rock music in Europe and the United States.

Today there are four former Beatles, all winning individual chart successes. And if lead singer Mick Jagger has his way that's the way it is going to be with the Rolling Stones.

Jagger

"I'd like Keith (Richard, lead guitarist) to do a solo album and Mick (Taylor, second guitarist with the Stones) is ready to go with one," Jagger said in an interview.

"Stones solo albums will be different, though, kind of funny," Jagger said. "I mean like on a solo album by Keith, you'll have me, Charlie (Watts, drummer), Bill (Wyman, bassist) and Mick (Taylor) backing him — the Stones backing a solo Stone."

It has become "in" among a number of "hip" critics to put down the Stones. But their current album Sticky Fingers skimmed to the top of both "straight" mass audience and "underground" charts and professionals express few doubts that recordings by individual Beatles and the Stones will continue automatically to score high, possibly continue to dominate, in popularity and significance.

On another level, still screened somewhat by the Beatles and Stones, the British music scene seethes with efforts by newer, often younger, musicians to gain recognition. It is a ferment many musicians and critics find reminiscent of the dynamism which preceded the mid-1960s explosion of British rock.

The activity has attracted a number of young musicians from abroad "to absorb the vibrations." Most are mindful that ex-Beatle John Lennon once said all the Beatles did to trigger "Beatlemania" in the United States was to study American folk, rhythm and blues and rock and roll music, refine the results in the detachment of England and carry the product back to the land of its origin.

Barry Bolski, a young musician from Boston, Mass., is typical. Barry temporarily severed ties with New England, rented a house in North London and settled in with his guitar, tape recorder, compositions of his own and a stack of empty notebooks in which he scrawls lyrics as inspiration comes.

"I think, as it did before, any new major development in rock music is going to happen here," Barry said. "I'm in no real hurry. I'm going to take it easy here, listening to what's going on, writing and maybe, if I can find the right musicians, put together a band."

OUR LITTLE TOWN Village Life Gets An A-OK Rating

By GERTRUDE SKINNER
—Ruskin

Figures lie.

At least there seems to be a credibility gap between those figures posted on Ruskin's welcome sign at the north edge of town and those quoted by the United States government.

Our sign says that we have a population of 200 (census of 1960). The government says that we have a population of 239 (census of 1970).

Since I am absolutely no good at figures, allow me to add one to the government's 239 and make it an even 240. By so doing it will then be safe for me to say that our little town has increased in population by 1-5 in the last decade. An impressive gain, wouldn't you agree?

Figures do not lie.

That is if you will accept as 100% sincere the letters and telephone messages which Our Little Town receives re: an exodus from city to country living.

From California: Would there be a place in Ruskin for us? This area is crime infested . . . corruption and madness on all sides . . . it is practically impossible for us to function as decent human beings . . . we want out.

From New York City: It isn't the people that we miss for we see folks from Nebraska quite often . . . it is the LAND . . . we live in a concrete jungle surrounded on all sides by noise, traffic and pollution . . . life has become unbearable . . . it is a rat race. What about Ruskin?

Well, what about Ruskin? I can speak only for myself. I come up with the equation that 200 plus 239 plus 240 equals A-OK. Now that might not be the correct answer for everybody.

I would suggest that anyone interested in village life visit us and do their own homework before exploding our population any further.

Two Caribbean nations have announced the imminent issue of a new, high denomination for 1971. A sterling silver, $5 coin is being issued this year, for the first time, by Jamaica and Trinidad Tobago. The coin will be struck in frosted proof, now giving each of these nations a seven-coin proof set.

Jamaica's $5 coin will be 45 millimeters in diameter and struck in .925 fine sterling silver. Featured on the obverse is the bust of Norman Manley, one of Jamaica's leading statesmen. The other six coins in Jamaica's 1971 proof set (which was originally issued in 1969) range from the cent to the dollar.

The $5 coin from Trinidad Tobago is also minted in .925 sterling silver and is 40 millimeters in diameter. Available this year for the first time — and only in proof set — this frosted proof coin features the national bird — Scarlet Ibis. The remaining six coins in the 1971 Trinidad Tobago proof set consist of the cent through the dollar, each bearing the nation's official coat of arms.

The 1971 proof sets of both Jamaica and Trinidad-Tobago are each housed in a deluxe, plush-lined presentation case. Both will be struck this year by the Franklin Mint, one of the world's foremost private minting institutions.

Both the 1971 Jamaica and Trinidad-Tobago proof sets give you the optional choice of either a six- or a seven-piece set (the latter would include the $5 coin). All coins from the cent to the dollar are included in the six-piece set.

Nazi Germany: Hitler's Plan, the Way It Was

Secret Conversations With Hitler. Edited by Edouard Calic; John Day.

The 12-Year Reich: A Social History of Nazi Germany, 1933-1945. By Richard Grunberger; Holt, Rinehart & Winston.

In May and June of 1931, almost two years before he came to power, Adolf Hitler granted two secret interviews to Richard Breiting, editor of the influential conservative newspaper Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten, with the understanding that these were to be strictly off the record. Breiting, a former court reporter, was able to take Hitler's words in shorthand.

The future fuhrer was obviously eager to win this important editor to the cause of National Socialism and used all of his considerable powers of persuasion, speaking (for that time) with unusual candor.

In 1934, someone at party headquarters remembered the interviews and demanded that Breiting turn over all of his notes. He immediately hid all of his papers with his sister and claimed that he had destroyed them.

His subsequent failure to become an ardent Nazi rendered him suspect, and in 1937 he was taken to lunch by Gestapo agents, after which he became violently ill and died. The two interviews remained hidden and have only recently come to light in Secret Conversations With Hitler.

Their authenticity is vouched for, not only by members of the Breiting family, but also by experts familiar with the Hitler style.

The documents reveal plans which Hitler proceeded to carry out during the ensuing years. Many of these were, of course, already available in Mein Kampf, but Hitler tended to soft-pedal some of the more extreme of them in the months when he was seeking to come to power through the national elections.

The Breiting interviews make it clear that this was purely a prudential tactic and that he had not wavered in his ultimate goals in any respect.

This document sheds important light on the question of Rudolf Hess' bizarre flight to England in May 1941. Hitler spoke to Breiting of his admiration for the British Empire and its control of the seas. He pointed to a possible division of the world between Britain and Germany in a sort of holy alliance against Bolshevism.

These remarks certainly make credible the thesis that, on the eve of Germany's invasion of the Soviet Union, Hess was sent to sound out the possibility of Britain's ending the war with Germany and joining in a drive to destroy the Communist colossus to the east. And when one remembers the violent antipathy of Winston Churchill toward the USSR, the possibility becomes even more alive.

Another interesting aspect of the interviews are Hitler's comments to Breiting on the Jewish question. He made no secret of his virulent anti-Semitism or of his plans to curtail sharply the participation of Jews in all aspects of German life. But he specifically forswore any intentions to eliminate them altogether.

It remains unclear to what extent this represented shrewd dissembling and to what extent the program of mass genocide emerged later on. As the editor observes, Hitler was a master of sensing what an audience wanted to hear and adjusting his words to their expectations.

If the interviews with Breiting represent blueprints for the future, Richard Grunberger's book describes the structure that was actually built. Thoroughly documented from contemporary sources.

It ranges widely over all aspects of life in the Third Reich, dealing with the party, the army, education, the family, the economy, agriculture, art, music and religion.

It would be easy for some to dismiss it as a polemic by a Jew born in Austria and forced, after the Anschluss, to emigrate to England, where he subsequently took a degree at King's College, Cambridge, and has achieved some note as a historian of Germany.

A careful reading of its pages, however, quickly dispels any such facile judgment, for the author is abundantly fair to the National Socialists and gives full credit for their actual achievements, which were many.

He does destroy the still widely held myth that the Jews were egregiously entrenched in the leadership of the Weimar Republic. In fact, the Jewish population of Germany was just under 1% and had been showing a steady decline for nearly half a century.

It is true that the Jews' representation among the professions and banking was much higher than their gross numbers, but by no means was this as disproportionate as is often believed. Among lawyers, they enjoyed 16% and among doctors and dentists only 10%.

Before World War I, no Jew could hold public office, including commissions in the army. This last bar was let down during the First World War, and the Weimar Republic lowered all of them.

Grunberger writes:

"While the general breakdown in morale (in 1919) rekindled widespread anti-Semitism, there occurred a transfer of political power to new leaders, who favored total emancipation and who included a few — though prominently placed — Jews. Out of the tension between these two aspects of the Jewish situation was fabricated a 'Jewish problem' that was to lie like an incubus on the Weimar Republic from its very inception; furthermore, the solution, as advanced by its fabricators, involved the very destruction of Weimar. The republic was branded as Jewish, and its introduction of isolated Jews to posts in the government and the higher civil service lent credence to the charge that it was a 'Jewish republic' by virtue of the fact that such an innovation constituted an unprecedented break with German tradition."

Grunberger reveals in gruesome detail the real meaning of life under a totalitarian state, in which no facet of life, individual or collective, remained beyond the attention and control of the party and the government.

Some of the programs were more successful than others, and there was great variation among the different regions of Germany. The antireligious activities, for example, were less successful in the Catholic South than in the Protestant North, and the soil of the seeds of anti-Semitism proved far more fertile in the rural areas than in the larger cities.

Corruption was rampant in the higher echelons, but brutally punished among lower officials. The regime preached a rigorous puritanical ethic to its people, but practiced a remarkable libertinism amongst its leaders and warriors.

Grunberger writes a thoroughly responsible and respectable history of the facts, producing a fascinating companionpiece to George Orwell's fictional 1984.

Our Colonial Red People

Red Power: The American Indians' Fight for Freedom. By Alvin M. Josephy Jr.; American Heritage Press.

"The aim of red, or Indian, power — the right of Indians to be free of colonialist rule and to run their own affairs, with security for their lands and rights — is the major theme of contemporary Indian affairs and of this book."

So states Alvin M. Josephy Jr.'s first paragraph in Red Power. One could assume he is writing about the peoples of some Third World country, since he uses those overworked clichés "colonialism" and "self-determination."

But he is not. He is writing about the American Indian, and his terminology is the most accurate available, for American Indians are the most colonized and politically impotent people in the world today.

Josephy is the author of several books on Indians and has served as a governmental consultant on Indian affairs. Red Power contains excerpts from speeches, articles, studies and the like.

They cover such diverse subjects as the Hopi theogony and way of life, the statement of a Yakima-Cherokee soldier who resigned from the U.S. Army and an address on Indian affairs by President Nixon.

American Indians are the least understood of America's ethnic minorities. This lack of understanding — or, even worse, misunderstanding — has resulted in a system of Indian administration that costs the American taxpayer $1,250 per year for each Indian served and provides one federal employe for every 16 Indians.

Despite the cost, the American Indian is at the bottom of the scale by any economic or social indices. His per-capita income is the lowest, his health the worst, his educational level the lowest, his infant mortality rate the highest, his housing the poorest and his life expectancy far below the national average. But perhaps the most meaningful and tragic indices are suicide and alcoholism rates, highest in the nation.

Josephy documents a series of ostensibly unrelated subjects, but with a short introduction, he places each in a proper perspective.

The book contains analyses of the system of Indian administration and how it saps the spirit of the oppressed. It contains pleas and demands for the right of Indians to determine their own destiny, to make the decisions that directly affect their lives. It contains the demand of Indians to remain Indians, and their tenacity is implicit throughout the book.

Josephy does not point out, however—except in the most oblique fashion — the fallacy of the entire governmental course. The policy is not self-determination.

Most of the Indians in policy-making positions in the Bureau of Indian Affairs spend their time writing their resignations, for they have found that the people who carry out their directives are the same paternalistic bureaucrats who were with the bureau before the Indians came.

Indian militancy will continue until there are some meaningful changes, not simply the announcement of new policies and programs.

The Indians have seen their children humiliated by an educational system designed to "de-Indianize" them. They have seen their children drink themselves to death in frustration. They have been the subjects of the cruelest forms of racism. They have pleaded, explained and begged, all to no avail.

They are no longer asking for justice. They are demanding it, and those Indians Josephy calls the new Indian patriots are the vanguard. Alcatraz was only a beginning.

Q. I would like to know if Robert McNamara, the former Defense Secretary, was ever a Rhodes scholar. Also, why did he order the history of our involvement in Vietnam written if he didn't want it published?—Milton King, Houston, Tex.

A. McNamara in 1937 was one of three candidates from the University of California for a Rhodes scholarship. The other two were Willard Goodwin and Bruce Waybur. It was Waybur who won it.

McNamara ordered an exhaustive history of our involvement in Vietnam for the specific purpose of guiding and informing the public in future crises. McNamara does not believe in burying mistakes. He believes in accountability. His whole life has been concerned with the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge. It was not he who classified the Pentagon Papers, "Top Secret." It was Les Gelb in charge of the task force that wrote the papers. Says Gelb: "I routinely assumed that I had the right to classify documents 'Top Secret.' No one ever said I had such authority. I just assumed I had. Who knows? Maybe I didn't."

Q. How much did it cost for the wedding of President Nixon's daughter and who paid for it—the father of the bride, or the taxpayers?—A.G., Charleston, W. Va.

A. The White House will not reveal the wedding cost. President and Mrs. Nixon paid for the wedding out of their own funds. In such a White House function, however, there is always an overlapping of private and public facilities, so that Ed and Tricia Cox got more goodies than did Julie and David Eisenhower. Not only in the way of gifts but also in the use of government property and personnel.

Q. Can you tell me if actress Martha Hyer, now married to producer Hal Wallis, was ever apprehended for smuggling? I read recently that she was.—N. Minnowsky, St. Paul, Minn.

A. She was fined $650 by U.S. Customs in March, 1968, for failing to declare a gift of jewelry from her husband.

RACHEL ROBERTS WITH DARREN RAMIREZ

Q. Rachel Roberts, ex-wife of actor Rex Harrison, is fooling around with Darren Ramirez, a Mexican dress designer. Do you know the age of each, please?—Nola Mason, Evansville, Ind.

A. Rachel Roberts, the fourth ex-Mrs. Harrison, is at least 40. Ramirez is 28.

Q. Is it true that H. Ross Perot is now the richest man in Texas? — Marvin Lehman, New York, N.Y.

A. H. Ross Perot, 41, is surely one of the richest men in Texas. At recent stock prices he is worth around $700 million, mostly in Electronic Data Systems, the company he founded and runs. He is also heavily invested in the firm of duPont Glore Forgan, Inc., which brokerage he is responsible for saving.

Q. How did the North Vietnamese handle the French prisoners of war when the French left Vietnam?—Geraldine Drew, Junction City, Oreg.

A. The French war in Indochina ended in July, 1954. By December of the same year the Viet Minh had repatriated all their surviving prisoners. Between 1946 and 1954 they took 36,979 prisoners, of whom only 10,754 were repatriated to France. Approximately 10,000 prisoners taken at the battle of Dien Bien Phu died along the 500-mile forced march to prison camp and the rest died in captivity.

Q. Is it true that Harding Lawrence, chief of Braniff Airlines, and his wife, Mary Wells of the advertising agency business, have bought the largest house on the French Riviera? How come? Don't they like Texas?—Hank Baldwin, San Antonio, Tex.

A. The Harding Lawrences recently bought for an undisclosed sum one of the most lavish villas on the French Riviera, La Fiorentina, once owned by the much-married Countess of Kenmare. The house was recently occupied by Mrs. Mary Lasker, widow of Albert Lasker, the advertising tycoon. It will soon be occupied by Virginia Linthicum, the former Mrs. Clint Murchison. The Lawrences are most generous hosts. They like Texas but also like to travel widely, have homes in New York City, Dallas, Acapulco, elsewhere.

Q. I am confused as to the number of men we have listed as prisoners of war in Southeast Asia. We claim around 1500. The Vietnamese say they have less than 500. What is the truth?—Mrs. L. T. Abel, W. Palm Beach, Fla.

A. The Southeast Asia casualties statistical summary released last month by the U.S. Defense Department lists as "current captured or interned" 465 of our men. It also lists as "current missing" 1026 of our men. Whether or how many of "the missing" are also prisoners of war, no one knows at this writing.

Q. How much has it cost Beatle John Lennon in his fight for his wife's daughter by a previous marriage?—Chris Truman, Chicago, Ill.

A. Lennon says he has already spent $140,000 battling for 7-year-old Kyoko, daughter of wife Yoko Ono. "I am now prepared," he says, "to start full legal proceedings to win custody of the child. My wife has seen her daughter only four or five times in the past two years. That's an intolerable situation." Anthony Cox, Mrs. Lennon's first husband, was awarded legal custody of the child.

Washington's Muscle Builders

by Mary Finch Hoyt

WASHINGTON D.C.

Politics is not the most common denominator among the VIP folks in Washington. Exercise is. With President Nixon setting the example—he jogs and bowls—the big names are busy every day at tennis, golf, swimming, karate, pushups, handball, cycling, sauna bathing and even just plain walking. A foreign diplomat observed the other day, "This has got to be the most exercise-conscious national capital in the world."

The determination to keep in shape and fight off fat can be seen on all sides. The Pentagon Officers Athletic Association reports that 1000 persons a day use the gym and jogging path. Members of the National Press Club have voted to install a "health spa" in the basement of their building and the same is planned for the White House staff in the Executive Office Building.

"I hate to exercise for exercise's sake," President Nixon has said, but he underlined the need for this—"When a person feels better, he works better." And he dutifully jogs in place in his bedroom, stepping up the pace as he goes along.

Friendly swimmers

This massive devotion to flexing muscles leads to a wide personality mix. At the Watergate Health Club—a sort of health factory—a peek in the pool may reveal Attorney General John Mitchell paddling about beside Transportation Secretary John Volpe. California's Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston, the nephew of Charles Atlas and a former Miss Israel. And recently there was an incident—male members "threatened" Chief Justice Warren Burger with a vote of censure because of his habit of hanging his clothes on an open locker door.

Wisconsin's Democratic Sen. William Proxmire is among the most dedicated. He walks 4.7 miles to the Capitol on work days and then may do 36 laps in the Hilton Racquet Club pool. On top of this, some call him "Pushup Proxmire" because of his activity in that exercise.

Rep. James Symington, Missouri Democrat, who likes karate as "a great conditioner," recalls that when he used to be U.S. Chief of Protocol "I formed a little group with Jack Valenti, the French Consul and the Venezuelan Ambassador. We met on Saturday mornings at the Venezuelan Embassy and paired off to work off what we'd gained at Friday night's formal dinners and receptions."

Exercise of government: President Nixon, an ardent bowler, sets pace for Washingtonians keeping physically fit

The most secret exercisers are the members of the U.S. Senate. Most of them use their gym for several hours each week—in fact, "gym time" is listed on their daily schedules. But nobody can get in to see just what they do—they're unavailable to press, constituents and politicians as they go through their Senatorial shakes.

Handball and rowing

It's easier to get into the House of Representatives' handball courts and rowing machine area. In addition, the House has provided a mini-spa for women members and gives them the use of the swimming pool at certain hours. "Right before morning committee meetings," says Rep. Charlotte Reid, Illinois Republican, "and that means wet hair. So I do my own thing—Air Force setting-up exercises and walking up and down all the Capitol steps."

Go to the yoga classes of Savitri Ahuja and you'll find an amalgam of amateur athletes seeking slenderness. Jackie Onassis' mother, Mr. and Mrs. Art Buchwald, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Eugene McCarthy and daughter Ellen, and the wives of Senators Muskie, Young, Hatfield and Percy—all there.

Says Jane Muskie: "Savitri releases the pressures that build up in political life. She makes campaigning easier. She showed me how to stand on my heels and the balls of my feet and let my toes hang loose. Now I can stand in a receiving line and shake hands 500 times without getting tired."

They all look alike

Savitri doesn't really know one pupil from another. Says she: "The minute they put on a leotard, they're all the same to me. Each one pays the same. I'm glad I don't know which is which."

At the St. Albans Tennis Club, lessons are given to World Bank President Robert S. McNamara and Sen. George McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who wants to be President. And at the Burning Tree Club—women are allowed there only once a year—Cabinet members Laird, Rogers, Romney and Mitchell golf along beside Senators Symington and Fulbright and that man whose ball occasionally hits somebody on the head—Vice President Agnew. Former Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford plays there and only after he left his post was this remark circulated: "Clifford is such a slow player that if they put his foursome on the Ho Chi

Minh trail, they'd back it up for 50 miles."

Mrs. Nixon, whose staff director says the First Lady "is all for exercise, mostly the outdoor type," evidently does not jog mornings with the President. But former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and his wife have been seen loping around their lakeside home in sneakers at night. And Sen. Mark Hatfield, the Oregon Republican, and his wife run in matching black nylon "his and hers" warmup suits.

When the National Jogging Association was formed, Sen. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina Republican, said: "This is one activity in which we can all participate whether we're Democratic, Republican or independent." A new father at 68, Thurmond is one of the most ardent body builders in town.

While he jogs out of duty, President Nixon bowls for fun. He has explained: "Bowling is better for me than golf because it doesn't take as much time." The President bowls two or three times a week in the White House, often alone. The story is told that when an aide heard he had a score of 67, he congratulated the President on his golfing. "Not golf," Mr. Nixon corrected. "Bowling."

"Pushup Proxmire" is nickname for the Senator from Wisconsin. One of Washington's most dedicated exercisers, he especially enjoys jogging.

■ Some people want to be slender—for appearance. Most people ought to be slender—for their health. Whatever your reason for removing those pounds, or for keeping the figure you have now, here is a book that can help—The Anti-Coronary Cookbook. Written by two dietitians—Nathalie Havenstein and Elizabeth Richardson—it gives you more than 150 low-calorie and low-fat recipes without any sacrifice of flavor. Take the beef in Burgundy—you'll have no hesitation in serving that to guests. Or the Malaysian lamb curry. Or the veal ragout. Because we feel that this book will be a real help to weight-conscious families, PARADE is offering it for only $1.

There is a foreword by Dr. Campbell Moses, medical director of the American Heart Association, who writes that the recipes "conform with the suggestions of the American Heart Association for use by the 'healthy' public to reduce the risk of heart attack."

THE ANTI-CORONARY COOKBOOK is the most recent of several books that PARADE has made available to readers at bargain prices as the nucleus of a home health library. Now we offer three of these along with The Anti-Coronary Cookbook—a total of four books for $3. Of course, any one of the four can be purchased separately for $1 each.

The three other books are:

HELP FOR YOUR ACHING BACK, by Dr. Harvey P. Kopell, one of the nation's leading orthopedic surgeons, in collaboration with Dr. Nancy C. Kester. Dr. Howard A. Rusk, the expert on body rehabilitation, comments in a foreword "The sections on rest, sleep, sports and even sex are frankly discussed and make an important contribution."

HELP FOR YOUR HEADACHE, by Edward Edelson, tells you in clear, untechnical language just about all there is to know of this extremely common human ailment. It advises on both relief and prevention of headaches and it clears up many misconceptions.

LIVING WITH ARTHRITIS, by Dr. A. B. Corrigan, one of the world's foremost authorities on this common, painful, puzzling and sometimes crippling disease. In light of recent medical discoveries, this is an optimistic book, but it also warns against the many quacks who prey on arthritis sufferers.

PARADE believes these books are a great and useful bargain at $3 for all four.

TO ORDER YOUR COPY OR COPIES:

Send your name, address, zip code and $1 in cash, check or money order for any of the four books or $3 for all four to PARADE, P.O. Box 187, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, New York, N. Y. 11218. Allow 3 weeks for delivery.

My Favorite Jokes

by Lon Ritchie

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lon Ritchie's many interests might seem unrelated. But he is an entertainer who has a way of working things into his life harmoniously. First he left his native Massachusetts at age 7 with an uncle to join the Orsini Circus in Europe.

At 19 he was recognized as one of Europe's leading trapeze artists and, as a by-product, became an excellent dancer. "It was a necessity. When I was a trapeze artist I'd wait in the wings to go on. The elephants would be coming off stage. If you weren't fast on your feet you got trampled!"

As a singer he first sprang to international attention with his version of the theme from the movie, Romeo and Juliet, but had already won a steady following in France. Ritchie spices his performance with humor, favoring the short quip, the lively, fast comment. Astrology is one of his major interests—Capricorn his sign, and he says "Capricorns are supposedly good comedians." Singers, too? "Yes. They're known for their different-sounding voices, Presley, Merman, Ray, Dietrich."

Ritchie has appeared many times on TV; his current recording is "The Lon Ritchie Album." He lives in New York City. Herewith some of his favorite jokes and one-liners.

The best acting in Hollywood is done by the stars congratulating the Academy Award winners.

Proud mother, exhibiting her baby. "He's eating solids now—pencils, keys, newspapers, rubber bands, spiders and ashtrays."

A 7-year-old boy was being taught the proper way to ask a girl for a dance by the teacher in the dance instruction class. A half hour later the kid asked the teacher, "Now, how do I get rid of her?"

Harassed surgeon to medical students watching a delicate operation: "Will the wise guy who keeps saying 'oops' please leave!"

The best place to find out what shape the country's in is at the beach.

A youngster, reading about King Arthur, asked her father what a charger was. His answer: "In the old days it was what a man rode on. Today, it's something he married."

Heard an authentic Latin band the other night. They were continually changing leaders.

The jealous husband was sure his wife had a boyfriend, so he hired a detective to shadow her and take movies of what he saw. A few weeks later the detective reported with the film. "Well, here it is," he said, "all the evidence... and with your best friend, too!"

He ran the film and the husband saw the pictures of his wife and his best friend as they ate luncheon, took a swim, bowled, danced, and had a real good time. After a while the husband shook his head and said, "I just can't believe it, I just can't believe it!"

"But," replied the detective, "the evidence is all here."

"No," answered the husband, "that's not what I mean... I just can't believe that my wife would be so much fun."

A suitable gift for a man who has everything—a burglar alarm.

A bachelor is a guy who doesn't have to leave a party when he starts having a good time.

Married man to good-looking bachelor: "How in the world have you managed to stay single so long?"

Bachelor: "It's easy. Every time I look at television commercials I learn that women are anemic, have stringy hair, large pores, are overweight and have rough hands."

A small town is a place where everyone knows whose check is good and whose husband isn't.

Heard about a new press agent who is having trouble publicizing his clients—he can't tell a lie.

It's to Laugh

G. DOLE

"I'd like to get involved in profit taking."

C. DAY

"That's ridiculous! I never dial a wrong number!"

E. LEPPER

"Honey, why don't we ever go anywhere?"

On her way to be a white First Lady of a black country is schoolteacher Regine Soule, 21, shown with

White Wives— African Status Symbol

by Lloyd Shearer

Ruth Williams Khama, 47, English-born and bred, is recognized as the Mother of Her Country, Botswana, in the heart of Black Africa.

Regine Soule, 21, attractive young French schoolteacher from Carcassonne, will occupy a similar position in November when she marries Ali Bourhan Aref, 36, President of the French East African Territory of Afars and Issas.

Ruth and Regine are not the only white wives of black African leaders. Senegal, the Republic of the Congo, Mauritania, Tunisia, and Kenya also boast, or did at one time, white First Ladies.

In emerging Africa, white wives have become status symbols. They represent all the desirable qualities the colonial powers so long denied their African subjects: self-respect, freedom of choice, independence.

Africa's leaders marry white women not only to prove that they themselves are the equal of white men but in some cases, owing to circumstances. For many years they lived and studied abroad in England or in France, where they met their white wives-to-be. Ten years ago—even now—relatively few black African women have the education background, and know-how necessary to complement a political leader in his duties.

However, the course of interracial love in Africa, as elsewhere, does not as a rule run smoothly.

Family opposition

In 1948, for example, when Seretse Khama, a young tribal chieftain from the British protectorate of Bechuanaland, was studying law at Oxford, he met Ruth Williams, then a secretary at Lloyd's of London. He proposed and was accepted. But both families strongly objected to the match. The government of the neighboring Union of South Africa protested vigorously that such a marriage would create a dangerous political and racial situation, and the Church of England refused to conduct the ceremony.

The Khamas spent six years of enforced exile in Britain while Seretse was compelled to renounce his succession to the throne. Only then was he allowed to return to Africa.

Today, after 23 years of marriage, Seretse Khama is the first President of the independent state of Botswana, where his wife and the mother of their four children is revered as "Mother of Us All."

The French, not quite as color-conscious as the British, generated fewer difficulties when Leopold Senghor, black deputy to the National Assembly from the French Colony of Senegal, took a French bride after World War II.

'Always color-blind'

Senghor, a poet-professor-statesman, says, "When it comes to people I have always been color-blind. I looked for a wife not on the basis of skin color, but whether I could love her and she could return that love. Colette is the woman of my heart, and it's only an accident that she is white."

Mrs. Senghor, the former Colette Hubert of Paris, now mother of three, travels widely with her husband, who has been President of Senegal since 1960.

Not so Clothilde Ngouabi, 29-year-old French wife of Marien Ngouabi, Congo President. Black nationalism in Seretse Khama and British-born Ruth Williams were married in 1948, over objections of both their families.

Today he's President of the African state of Botswana, and she is known as "the Mother of Her Country."

Moktar Ould Daddah, Mauritania's Head of State, has a French-born wife, Marie-Therese, but insists she remain in seclusion, in the Moslem way.

Edna Clarke, an English schoolmistress, was married for 20 years to Jomo Kenyatta, President of Kenya, who divorced her to wed an African woman.

WHITE WIVES

the West African state requires that Mrs. Ngouabi, a former salesgirl, lead a life of quiet seclusion with her two sons and keep out of the public eye.

In Mauritania the same holds true for Marie-Therese Daddah, French wife of Moktar Ould Daddah, who is Head of State. Daddah insists that his wife remain in seclusion like all good Moslem wives.

When he marries his young French fiancée Regine, Ali Bourhan Aref of Afars and Issas will break with Islamic custom. He is now divorcing his present two wives as a concession to European sensibilities.

But white wives and European customs are losing their status elsewhere in Africa as some African leaders gain self-confidence, self-assertion, and pride of Africanism. Two of Africa's most respected elder statesmen, both married in their youth to European women, have divorced their white wives.

Jomo Kenyatta, President of Kenya, met and married schoolmistress Edna Clarke when he was living in England. Twenty years and one son later, Kenyatta divorced her.

Divorce after 37 years

When he was a student at the University of Paris after the first World War, Habib Bourguiba married a young Frenchwoman, Mathilde Lorrain, who also bore him a son. In 1961, Bourguiba, since become the President of Tunisia, divorced his wife after 37 years of marriage.

But Kenyatta, 80, and Bourguiba, 67, did not renounce their European wives just to live out their twilight years in stately celibacy. Both are now remarried to young women of their own culture.

INSTANT REPLAY— HOW IT WORKS

The football season is back with us again, if it ever really left, and with it the "instant
replay."

In any group of football fans you can hear a wide variety of opinions on how immediate playbacks of action highlights are achieved. The truth, of course, is that most people don't know.

The facts are these:

In 1967 the Ampex Corporation developed a special instant replay recording device.

Unlike videotape record-ers, which use reels of videotape to record and replay most of the scenes we view on TV, the instant replay recorder uses a shiny metal disk about the size of a pizza platter. On this shiny disk, the machine records only 30 seconds of television action
at a time.

The replay machine costs
$100,000, and since 1967 the networks and independent TV production companies have bought more than 100 of them, an outlay of $10 million, which will give you a small idea of what value the TV producers place on the instant
replay.

The disk is used instead of tape, because reproduction people can backtrack exactly to the start of a recorded play on the disk in less than four seconds.

The instant replay can then be aired before the next play or commercial.

Tape reels, on the other hand, take longer to re-wind, and it is far more difficult to spot a starting place on tape. Since no play lasts longer than 30 seconds, the 16-inch disk works out fine.

In an important football game as many as three instant replay machines are used. Each is capable of recording the action from one to eight cameras located in different areas of the stadium. The cameras beam live pictures into a bank of television monitors located in a van parked outside the stadium. From these eight sources, a director in the van chooses what goes on the air. He can talk with the cameramen, the instant replay recorder operators, and a technical director who pushes the buttons that select which camera's view is aired.

One word from the director, and the instant replay operator can reshow that controversial run or touchdown pass at normal speed, slow motion, or freeze the action at key points. He can, however, record from only one preselected camera
at a time.

The television director

"INSTANT REPLAY" KIT: DISKS MAGNETICALLY RECORD TV PICTURES FROM CAMERA. OPERATOR'S UNIT HAS BUTTONS TO START AND STOP; SHE HOLDS STICK THAT CONTROLS SPEED OF REPLAY, PERMITTING "STOP MOTION." IN DETAIL BELOW.

tries to anticipate the plays. Experienced directors, with several instant replay recorders at their disposal, have high instant replay completion percentages. Sometimes, however, they guess wrong. But then again, a quarterback who can't fool a TV director now and then isn't going to find himself on TV very often anyway.

STUDY ABROAD— YOU MAY HAVE TO

The U.S. needs more doctors, but our medical schools are already overcrowded.

According to the American Medical Association, there are 25,000 applications to U.S. medical schools every year. Ten thousand are accepted, but a further

7000 who are fully qualified must be rejected for lack of space.

More and more of the qualified but rejected candidates are seeking their medical education abroad: an estimated 4000 to 8000, the AMA reports, including 1000 at the University of Guadalajara in Mexico.

Doctors with foreign degrees must however put in up to two years more training in the U.S. to meet AMA standards before they can practice here.

Some irate med students charge that the AMA sets artificially high standards in order to maintain a small, expensive profession in the U.S., but more and more foreign-educated doctors are willing to make that extra effort. Nearly one-third of the 11,032 new physicians licensed in the U.S. last year, the "Journal of the American Medical Association" reports, graduated from foreign medical schools.

60 PROFESSIONAL OIL PASTELS

New Professional Dustless Type

A huge assortment of pastels with no two colors the same. These professional dustless pastels can be mixed and blended but never make a mess. They are as convenient as pastels yet have the brilliance and color depth of oil paints. Sticks will not crumble or break easily and can be used on paper, board, cloth, stone or plaster. They are excellent for quick sketches as well as finished drawings and paintings. You may also use turpentine to blend colors and heighten the oil effect. Completed oil pastel paintings do not require fixing and can be framed like a water color painting. Non-toxic composition makes them perfect for adults or young "Picassos"! Great for portraits, landscapes, anything at all. A great gift and a great buy for only $2.98.

INTELLIGENCE CONTINUED

CRIME-FREE COUNTRY

One of the most crime-free countries in the entire world is Iceland, an island about the size of Virginia, lying in the North Atlantic Ocean.

It has a population of 200,000, and its people are so law-abiding that they have experienced only six murders in the last 30 years.

There is no capital punishment in Iceland. People are convivial and helpful. Armann Kristinsson, a judge who sent one of Iceland's rare murderers to jail, invited the convict after his release to be his house guest. Today the men are fast friends.

Iceland was colonized largely by Norwegians. It is a remarkably homogeneous country, 80 percent urban, 97 percent of the people subscribing to the Evangelical Lutheran faith.

Officials in Iceland do not believe that harsh sentences deter crime. If a youngster is found guilty of petty theft or drunkenness, he is given a deferred sentence, what the Icelandic court terms a "suspended indictment" and placed under "social surveillance."

From 80 to 90 percent of youngsters under deferred indictments never again commit another crime. Parents and relatives make sure of that.

Iceland believes that the function of a penal system is rehabilitation, not punishment, and permits prisoners to go into town to watch movies or visit relatives providing they return to jail by midnight, at which time the gates are locked.

LEISURE TIME, JAPANESE- STYLE

The Japanese, like other highly industrialized societies, are discovering the possibilities and pitfalls of leisure time.

They already have geishas, Kabuki theater, and spas--so what else should they do with their spare time?

Take siestas and travel abroad, recommends a study group on leisure activities.

The group, composed of government officials, professors, journalists and sociologists, expressed concern over the proliferation in Japan of American-style leisure institutions such as bowling alleys, discotheques, coffee houses.

Instead, the Japanese should cultivate such traditional pursuits as folding paper (Origami), arranging flowers, growing dwarf trees (Bonsai), studying Zen, writing verse (Haiku), or just "listening to the sigh of the wind in the pine trees."

The one foreign custom which the study group recommends for Japanese usage is the midday siesta, which would "turn one day into two by dividing it down the middle."

As for travel, the study group urges the industrious and introverted Japanese to make the acquaintance of the "fun-loving and extrovert" inhabitants of Micronesia, Australia, and Latin America.

KEEP COOL Trying to keep cool during the hot months of summer? The Office of Consumer Affairs has some practical advice which also serves to cut down on environmental pollution.

The easiest way to insure a cool, comfortable house during the hot summer months is, of course, air-conditioning. Unfortunately, however, air-conditioning consumes large amounts of costly electricity, which in turn increases our environmental pollution. And in large cities, there is also the danger of a power overload or brownout.

In a booklet entitled "11 Ways to Reduce Energy Consumption and Increase Comfort in Household Cooling," the Office of Consumer Affairs explains the type, location, and use of air-conditioning best suited to your home at the lowest cost to yourself and to society.

But whether or not your home is air-conditioned, you can significantly reduce the amount of heat which enters it by attention to sun-shading, insulation and ventilation.

Blinds and draperies, for example, reduce solar heat entering through windows by 50 percent. Even more effective are awnings and overhangs, which cut heat entry by as much as 80 percent.

Insulation of your top-floor ceiling and external walls will also reduce heat entry, and attic ventilation by means of an electric fan may significantly reduce the downward flow of heat throughout the whole house.

For these and other hints on how to keep cool, write to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for your copy of "11 Ways to Reduce Energy Consumption and Increase Comfort in Household Cooling" (35 cents). Or if you are interested in countermeasures for cold weather, ask for "7 Ways to Reduce Fuel Consumption in Household Heating."

Cool Refreshment

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Refreshment for a warm afternoon or evening — fragile lemon-flavored wafers with crisp brown edges and tall frosty glasses filled with a sparkling mixture of pineapple juice, lemon juice and dry ginger ale.

Lemon Wafers

2 cups sifted	1 egg, unbeaten
all-purpose flour	1 tablespoon
2 teaspoons	grated lemon
baking powder	peel
1/2 teaspoon salt	1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup shortening	1/4 cup lemon juice
1 cup sugar	1/2 cup water

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually while creaming; continue creaming until light and fluffy. Blend in egg, lemon peel and vanilla, beat well. Add dry ingredients alternately with lemon juice and water; blend smooth after each addition. (Dough will be very soft.) Drop by teaspoons 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheets. Bake at 375° for about 10 minutes or until edges are light brown. Remove cookies to wire cake racks to cool. Makes about 5 dozen.

Fruit Sparkle

1 cup mint jelly	1/2 cup lemon juice
2 cups water, divided	1 bottle (28 oz.) dry
3 cups unsweetened	ginger ale, chilled
pineapple juice	Lemonade ice cubes*

Combine mint jelly and 1 cup water in saucepan. Stir over low heat until jelly is melted. Cool. Add pineapple juice, remaining 1 cup water, and lemon juice. Chill thoroughly. Place ice cubes in tall glasses; fill half full with fruit mixture. Fill to top with ginger ale. Garnish with lemon slices and sprigs of fresh mint. Makes about 10 servings.

*To make lemonade ice cubes dilute frozen lemonade concentrate as directed on cans; pour into ice cube trays; freeze firm.

Our New Young Voters

Seventy-six percent of our new 18-to-21-year-old voters—14 million will be eligible in 1972—say they are either "absolutely certain" or "fairly certain" to cast ballots in the next Presidential election.

This is one of the findings in a special Gallup Poll commissioned by PARADE.

One of four new young voters would campaign for candidates of their choice, according to the poll. They will be independent-minded, but if they do favor a party it will be the Democrats.

This confirms a comment made by Fred Slight, special programs director for the Republican National Committee: "We are the underdog and we face a major challenge."

Here are the results of the poll:

LIKELIHOOD OF VOTING

"Of course it's early to tell, but just your best guess at this point—how certain are you to vote in the election in November, 1972—absolutely certain, fairly certain, or not certain at all?"

"Do you think the Nixon Administration is or is not giving young people 'a piece of the action' in this country?"

Is .....	50%
Is not .....	38
No opinion .....	12

It may seem contradictory that the same young voters who favor the Democratic Party say President Nixon has been responsive to youth, but, says George Gallup Jr.: "We can't forget that the 18-to-21-year-olds got the vote while Nixon was in office, and they give him credit."

The tendency to vote the man, not the party, is prevalent among the new voters. In Changing Sources of Power, a new book about the future of the two parties, political strategist Frederick G. Dutton predicts that by 1980, when 38 percent of all voters will be under 35, Democrats and Republicans may be obsolete.

The Ripon Society, a Republican research and policy organization, has expressed a fear that if their party does not make greater inroads into the 18-to-30-year-old vote, it will be confined to permanent minority status.

Given the heavy registration of new voters—90 percent in some schools—and their expressed intention to vote, they could have a decisive role in the 1972 election.

Of course polls are never proven or disproven until Election Day, but the overall projection of PARADE's poll is that the 18-to-21-year-olds are an energetic voting force that every politician had better come to grips with.

Says Steve Carlson, 18, an architecture student at Montana State University: "If someone's going to send me to fight in Vietnam, or anyplace else, I want to decide who that someone is."

Pregnant Brides

How many teenage brides are pregnant on their wedding day?

In England, according to the Family Planning Association, the answer is 35 percent.

In this country, according to Dr. Paul Popenoe of the American Institute of Family Relations, "it is somewhere around 40 percent.

"About ten years ago," Dr. Popenoe explains, "a physician in Santa Barbara, Calif., Dr. Harold Gray, writing on the subject of premarital conception in the 'Journal of Psychology', gave the figure as 47 percent, but he included 20-year-old girls. If one limits premarital pregnancy to teenagers, girls 13 to 19, a safe estimate would be 40 percent. Were it not for the Pill, of course, it would be much higher."

Again, according to the British Family Planning Association, "Teenage girls are more liable than older women to suffer from various complications during their pregnancy.

"Their babies are more likely to be premature and die within the first week of life."

The FPA reports what statistics have long borne out: the younger one marries, the greater the chance for early dissolution of the marriage.

"Early marriage, perhaps precipitated by an unplanned baby," the report states, "often results in the disruption of education, is associated with high fertility and obstetric hazards, and carries a greater risk of not enduring than a later marriage."

Salary and Degree

How much is a Master of Business Administration degree worth in salary dollars to young persons just beginning their careers in the world of business?

The answer is at least $3000 more per year, according to a survey of 600 MBA's who earned the advanced degree from the University of Southern California's Graduate School of Business Administration in the 1960-70 decade.

The survey shows the "median" MBA degree-holder is a married, home-owning Republican, earning a salary of $17,500 to $18,400 per year.

At Banquet we think a good pie is more important than a good buy. It has to be as good as you'd make yourself. Flaky, golden crusts. Generous meat and vegetable fillings. Creamy sauces.

Thank goodness for Banquet.

An Open Letter to President Nixon

*D*ear Mr. President:

I respectfully urge you to give top priority to the establishment of a Washington-Peking hot line.

When PARADE originally proposed this emergency communications link nearly three years ago—Sept. 29, 1968—you said it was "an interesting idea." You also indicated that you wished to explore the possibilities of improving relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China and that many problems must be overcome before hot line negotiations could begin. Your upcoming trip to China now provides such an opportunity.

In this era of super-sophisticated technology, nuclear, satellite and testing accidents are possible. As you know, a number of accidents have occurred over the years.

This problem will soon be even more complex when China becomes the third nation, along with the U. S. and the U.S.S.R., to possess the intercontinental ballistic missile.

A Washington-Peking hot line would serve not only to prevent the misinterpretation of accident as attack, but in times of crises it would serve as a near-instant communicator of our reaction and intention.

Since 1963, the Washington-Moscow hot line—which PARADE proposed in 1960—has served the nation well on at least 15 occasions, including the Six-Day War in the Middle East and the Tonkin Gulf incident.

A Washington-Peking hot line is a similar necessity.

PARADE respectfully suggests that you place it on your agenda when you visit the People's Republic of China.

Sincerely,

JESS GORKIN
EDITOR OF PARADE

Yes, the butterflies you see in these marvelous portraits are real butterflies! To the fresh, sweet charm of each dainty maiden, noted palettist Hartnett, has added the dramatic beauty of real butterflies, the same ones that dot a summer field with bursts of movement and color. The results are rhapsodic portraits vibrating with a charm and innocence that you seem to be seeing as if in a dream. The Butterfly Maidens are so absolutely appealing that they are exactly that final touch you are looking for to give a decorator feel to any setting. Unfortunately, it is literally impossible to recapture the liquid clear colors of the figures, the vibrancy of the butterflies from the small illustrations here, but can't you just imagine the beauty and appeal they bring to any room when once you see them for real?

THIS SEASON

Because the reproduction of these delicate works requires the utmost craftsmanship, we urge you to order now, while our special supply lasts. Each full color masterpiece is reproduced on luxurious art stock and measures a full 11" x 14". Hurry, order now, this offer will not be repeated this season in this magazine.

"NEAR" SPACE IS A VAST NEW CONTINENT IN ORBIT 200 MILES UP, SAYS FORMER NASA ADMINISTRATOR THOMAS PAINE. SPACE PIONEERS WILL GO NOW FROM THE EXPEDITION PHASE (JUST AS PIONEERS ON EARTH) TOWARD PERMANENT ORBITING WORKING AND LIVING QUARTERS.

THE SPACE SHUTTLE WILL BE "AMPHIBIOUS" — (TAKE OFF AND LAND ON EARTH, BUT ALSO DOCK IN SPACE). IN ADDITION, SPACE "TUGS", DESIGNED ONLY TO WORK IN SPACE, WILL HELP "ASTRO-HARDHATS" TO BUILD THE SPACE COMMUNITIES.

THESE SPECIAL VEHICLES WILL COME — WHEN DEPENDS ON HOW FAST WE DECIDE TO MOVE IN SPACE BUILDING TO REQUIRE THEIR USE.

CHILDREN'S TALES

A SHORT DOG STORY

PART II

FOR DAYS AFTER I WAS MISERABLE. WOULD I EVER SEE THAT LOVELY LITTLE CREATURE AGAIN?? I PACED AND SIGHED ALOT, EVEN REFUSING MY DINNER. BUT FINALLY, MY MASTER PUT ON MY LEASH, WE WERE GOING FOR A WALK! PERHAPS I WOULD SEE HILDIE! I WAS REALLY LUCKY FOR I DID SEE HER THAT DAY AND THE NEXT DAY AND EVERY DAY AFTER.

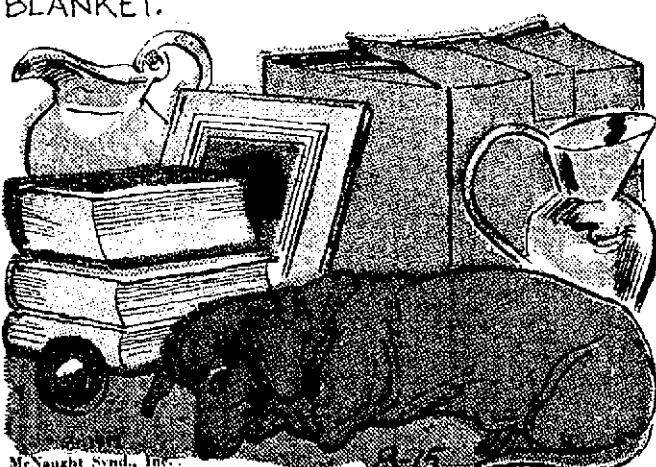

FROM THEN ON, I STARTED DEMANDING EVEN MORE WALKS. I WAS REALLY A PEST. BUT ANYTHING TO SEE HILDIE.

ONE DAY I DIDN'T SEE HILDIE OR HER MISTRESS ON MY WALK, DAYS AND DAYS WENT BY. I WAS MISERABLE. WHAT COULD HAVE HAPPENED???

AND THEN TO MAKE MATTERS EVEN WORSE, MY MASTER STARTED PUTTING MANY THINGS IN BOXES. THE APARTMENT WAS A MESS. I COULDN'T EVEN FIND MY BLANKET.

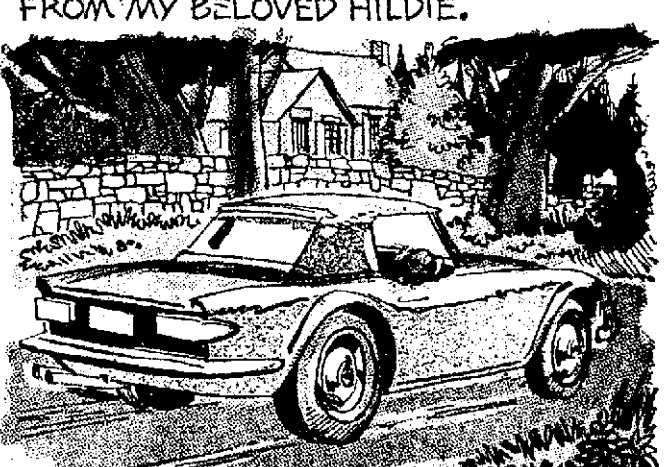

WELL, I'M NO DUMMY. WE WERE MOVING! AND PROBABLY TO THE COUNTRY. UGH! ALL THOSE TREES AND GRASS AND NO ELEVATORS! BUT WORST OF ALL I'D NEVER SEE HILDIE AGAIN.

FINALLY, THE LAST BOX WAS PACKED AND THE FURNITURE WAS IN THIS BIG TRUCK. I WAS UNDER MY MASTER'S ARM AND I KNEW THIS WAS THE DAY WE WERE LEAVING.

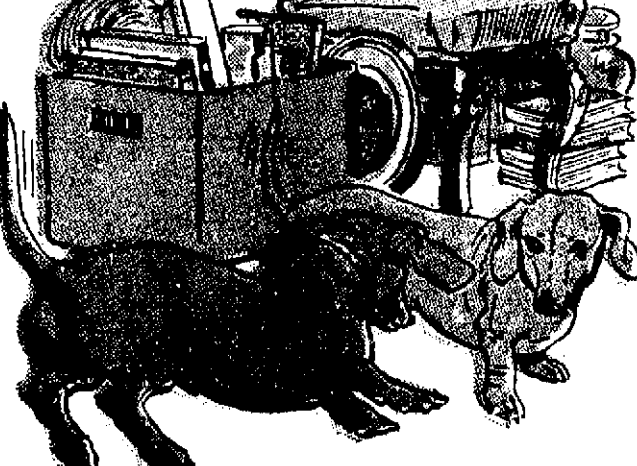

WE RODE IN THE CAR FOR A LONG TIME AND I KEPT ON SEEING MORE AND MORE TREES AND GRASS. AND I KEPT ON GETTING FURTHER AND FURTHER AWAY FROM MY BELOVED HILDIE.

WE PULLED UP TO A BIG HOUSE, WELL, I WAS SO MISERABLE, MY MASTER HAD TO PRACTICALLY PUSH ME THROUGH THE FRONT DOOR. BUT WHEN I GOT THROUGH IT, I COULDN'T BELIEVE MY EYES.

THERE WAS HILDIE AND HER MISTRESS! MY MASTER AND HILDIE'S MISTRESS DID ALOT OF HUGGING. I THINK THEY WERE MARRIED.

HILDIE AND I HAD A GREAT LIFE AFTER THAT. WE WERE TOGETHER ALL THE TIME AND WOULD TAKE LONG WALKS THROUGH THE WOODS. AND DO YOU KNOW WHAT?? WE HAVEN'T SEEN AN ELEVATOR SINCE AND DON'T EVEN CARE!

Color this dog and you may win a trip to Disneyland.

Just color this dog and draw in a simple background. (Read complete rules below.) Then fill out the entry form and call the phone number. (It's free.) The operator will tell you the name and address of your nearest participating Hush Puppies store. Take your entry there. While you're there take a look at the shoes. You could win one of five family trips to Disneyland or the new Disney World. 1000 Hush Puppies watches. So color the picture. And call the number. 800-243-6000. In Connecticut, 1-800-942-0655. Ask for "Hush Puppies Contest" and know your post office zip code when you call.

- OFFICIAL RULES
- Just color the official entry picture of the Hush Puppies dog; using crayons, draw and color in the background scene consisting of palm trees and grass with sun and shadows as they would appear on a cloudless summer morning.
  - Print your name, age and address on an entry form and deposit it at a participating Hush Puppies dealer, who has additional entry forms available. Or you may use a plain piece of paper similar in size to the official entry form. You may enter as often as you wish. No purchase required.
  - Entries will be judged according to blending of colors to create realism 80%, drawing artistry 20%, both criteria to be in keeping with the scene described. Prizes will be awarded in equal amounts in age groups: thru 4 years of age, 5-6, 7-8, 9-16 and 17-12. Winners can go to Disneyland in California, or the new Disney World in Florida. Parents can go, too. (Four people in all.) Each first prize includes round trip jet transportation, 2 room—double occupancy, breakfast and dinner, five days—four nights. Approximate value $1,500.00. Watches valued at $12.00. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in the event of tie. Entries will be judged by art instructors from the University of Minnesota. Decisions of the judges will be final and no entries will be returned.
  - Entries must be received by September 30, 1971.
  - Coloring contest open to children of 12 years of age and younger who must do the coloring themselves without adult assistance. Children of Wolverine World Wide employees, their advertising agencies and Marden-Kane, Inc., are not eligible. Contest subject to federal, state and local laws and regulations. Void where prohibited by law.
  - Opportunity to win depends on number of entries received. Total audience exposure of this advertisement among children 12 and under is estimated at 89,179,266; additional retailer distribution is estimated at 111,000.
  - Verification of age and compliance with contest rules will be made upon completion of the contest. Winners may be asked, but not required, to cooperate in either national or local publicity.
  - Subject to federal, state and local laws, your local participating Hush Puppies retailer will be conducting a sweepstakes for a bicycle in accordance with sweepstakes rules at each store.
